Relief Failure Is Confessed By Roosevelt, G.O.P. Claims

Hoover Awaits AAA Court Test

Holds Up Plans for Farm Plank for Party Pending Decision.

The "horrible mess" of the Administration's public works and relief program was singled out yesterday for an attack by the National Republican Congressional Committee, while former President Herbert Hoover, in Chicago, was said by members of his traveling party to be withholding any suggestion for a farm plank for next year until the Supreme Court passes on AAA.

President Roosevelt's "recent effort" to defend the works program, the Republican committee said in a statement under the name of Representative Chester C. Bolton, chairman, "was forced by growing condemnation of the terrific waste involved."

Attack on Spending.

"The New Deal's philosophy seems to be that taxpayers will welcome paying heavily," the statement said, "for the unneeded Federal buildings at the Four Corners, the tap dancers, the opera singers, the eurythmic dancers, the chicken surveyers and the gadget makers, to mention only a few of the many fantastic uses to which New Dealers have put their money. Few will agree with that philosophy. * * *

"No explanation that can be made of the wastage of the people's money can alter the fact that the policies of President Roosevelt and his New Deal have had a devastating effect upon the financial structure of the country and the pocketbooks of our citizens. Nor can any explanation convince our people that with unemployment undiminished and with relief rolls as crowded as ever, the wanton waste of this Administration merits continuance of the New Deal or any part of it."

Declaring that Mr. Roosevelt "will always be known as the world's greatest spendthrift," the committee asserted that in three years he "stands to spend more than was needed to run the United States Government for 124 years, from Washington to Wilson."

Sees Confession of Failure.

Asserting that the President has been given $8,000,000,000, which "represents about $8 for every minute since the birth of Christ," to help speed recovery, the statement insists that relief rolls are as crowded as in 1933, "and in the confession of impotence to remedy this situation, a plea is now made to industry to take over the task."

Meanwhile, Hoover was in Chicago on his trip East following his bitter public attack on the New Deal at Oakland, Calif., Saturday night. The Associated Press reported members of his party picturing the former President as regarding the farm problem as a prime potential issue for 1936. They said he had been considering the farm question for some time, but feels that the time for suggestion of a plank will not come until the Supreme Court has ruled on constitutionality of the agricultural adjustment act.

The former executive was said to be following a course of assisting in the development of issues and giving what advice he can to aid his party. The Oakland speech, in which he attacked the Administration's "extravagance," was on an "issue" already developed, his associates said, and as other "issues" reach that point he will speak out, they said.

Vidal's Divorced Wife Weds Again

Mrs. Nina Gore Vidal Is Wed To Hugh Auchincloss, Broker

Washington Investment Man Marries Divorced Wife of U. S. Air Official in Ceremony at Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Nina Gore Vidal, recently divorced from Eugene L. Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce, was married yesterday afternoon to Hugh D. Auchincloss, Washington investment broker.

The ceremony took place in the apartment of Mrs. McKenney Mallan at the Wardman Park Hotel and was performed by the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., rector of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Only a few friends were present.

Bride Is Daughter of Senator.

The new Mrs. Auchincloss, daughter of Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma and a belle in Washington society, was married to Vidal after he had made a reputation as an all-American football star at West Point and as a flier in the World War. They had one son, Eugene, jr., 9.

She left here May 18 for Reno to establish residence on a dude ranch, Vidal seeing her off at Union Station. The divorce was granted on the grounds of cruelty.

Chauncey Parker Best Man.

There were reports then that Mrs. Vidal would marry Auchincloss, who was divorced from the former Maya de Chrapovitsky three years ago. Like the Vidals, the Auchinclosses had a son, Hugh, jr., 7.

Auchincloss and Mrs. Vidal applied for a marriage license here yesterday morning. He gave his age as 38 and hers as 32.

The bridegroom's best man was Chauncey Parker. The bride was unattended. Mrs. Mallan, in whose apartment the marriage took place, is the divorced wife of Blaine Mallan, a relative of the late Senator James G. Blaine, who narrowly missed being elected President of the United States.

Navy Plane Turns Back On Flight to Panama

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—The giant Navy patrol plane which took off from the Naval Air Station here at 4:55 p. m., on a projected 3,000-mile flight to Panama, returned shortly before 7 o'clock.

Officials at the air station said they were not advised as to what caused the return, but believed it was due to trouble with the radio transmitting set.

Labor Violence Ended, Perkins Informs A. F. L.

Asserts Industry, Workers Will Use Arbitration in Peaceful Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 8.—Peaceful industrial recovery was foreseen today by Secretary Perkins of the Labor Department.

Instead of the strikes and lockouts that have marked the end of past depressions, both employers and employes now are turning to the various Government labor boards for aid in settling their differences, Miss Perkins told the American Federation of Labor convention.

She predicted this policy would become even more general as recovery progressed.

"These agencies will gather authority as the years go on and as the spirit of co-operation between employers and employes continues to grow. As they become increasingly aware that it is in their interest and in the interest of the public as well, we will find the good offices of these boards being sought more and more as a voluntary substitute for long and costly strikes and lockouts," she said.

Jubilantly, Miss Perkins told the 600 delegates of signs that business steadily was getting better.

"The present acceleration is Nation-wide and industry-wide and is marked by the highly significant

Hazing Cases Investigated In Maryland

Mount Rainier Council Conducting Inquiry at High School.

An investigation of "disgraceful hazing" of new students at the recent opening of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood High School in Maryland is under way, it was learned yesterday.

The matter was brought before the common council of Mount Rainier at a meeting Monday night by Bert E. Sager, former town clerk. Sager offered a resolution which would have the mayor and the council express disapproval of the action of F. P. Blunt, principal, and of the teachers for "permitting this disgraceful hazing."

Action on the resolution went over until the next meeting, but Mayor Norman A. Pruitt appointed a committee to investigate. This is made up of A. J. Bates, John T. Duever, Carl E. Herberger, John E. Parsell, all members of the council, and Mr. Sager.

Injurious, He Charges.

In his resolution concerning the "flare-up of the archaic and discredited practice of hazing" at the opening of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood School, Sager said:

"This practice, however it may be tolerated and winked at in colleges, has no place in high schools, where children have not yet reached that stage of maturity so that they can either care for themselves in physical combat or take proper steps to avoid injury to health after being subjected to the unusual abuses and indignities."

Sager said parents wanted action taken, but were being held back by fear that an attempt would be made to discriminate against the children.

Teachers Reprimanded.

Mayor Pruitt said the matter had been brought to his attention by Principal Blunt, and he quoted Blunt as saying that Nicholas Orem, superintendent of schools, had reprimanded the teachers.

As the meeting of the council neared adjournment without any action having been taken, Duever demanded that a committee be appointed to investigate the charges that the school officials had done nothing to stop the hazing.

$879,714,000 Sought For Defense in France

Paris, Oct. 8 (AP).—Premier Laval's government today asked 13,329,000,000 francs ($879,714,000), for the nation's armed forces in 1936, while the premier himself sought to keep the Italo-Ethiopian war from spreading to Europe.

This is an increase of 2,041,000,000 francs above the 1935 expenditures shown in the national defense budgets, including the emergency appropriation for armaments.

At the same time, Marcel Regnier, minister of finance, revealed that the treasury is in a "delicate situation" since the government already has issued 14,500,000,000 francs of the 15,000,000,000 franc bonds it was authorized to float, with tax collections lower than expected.

Jolt—Cuss—Perfidy.

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 8 (AP).—A $1,000 claim filed with the Tulsa County Commissioners at their meeting here yesterday: "For one broken spring, $4.50; for mental anguish and loss of appetite, $500; for loss of wife's confidence, $1,098—and the balance for weakening my chance for a hereafter by cussing." The claimant said the damages resulted when his car bounced over a broken culvert.

60,000 More Men Rushed to Aksum

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Oct. 8.—A victorious Ethiopian drive 25 miles into Italian Eritrea by a daring flying column of 15,000 black cavalry was announced officially by Haile Selassie's government tonight simultaneously with unconfirmed rumors that Ethiopians had recaptured Aduwa and taken "thousands" of Italians prisoner.

At the same time, the government announced mass desertions of Italian native troops to the Ethiopian banner. It was asserted specifically that 50 Askaris arrived at Makale, south of Aduwa, bringing with them five machine guns, 12 mule-loads of ammunition and several cannon, and that 200 Askaris had deserted to Ethiopia on the Agame front in the northeast.

A brilliant operation by Ras Seyyoum, Ethiopian commander in the north, sent 15,000 men across the frontier into Eritrea Saturday, while the Italian columns were preparing to storm Aduwa, it was announced. Ethiopians had been ordered not to defend Aduwa.

Capital Reported Captured.

The raiding column was commanded by Haile Selassie's son-in-law, Dedjazmatch Haile Selassie Hugsa.

There were reports that this column, or another, had captured Adi Carich, 50 miles south of Asmara, the Eritrean capital and chief war base. These reports were received with reserve because such a drive would have taken the Ethiopians along the left flank of the great Italian army driving southward from Asmara.

Another large Ethiopian force, estimated at 60,000 men, was sent by Haile Selassie to the Aksum front, and still another was dispatched northward near the Sudan frontier. The Aksum force is commanded by Ras Kassa.

Repulsed by Natives.

[Reports that Aksum had been captured by the Italians were not confirmed. An official communique at Rome today said Ethiopian warriors had attacked Hagar on the ritrean side near the Sudan frontier and were repulsed by Italian Askari native troops.]

The 60,000 Ethiopians under Ras Kassa were expected to lead the Ethiopian defense, but were not expected to attack positions now held by 110,000 Italian troops in the north.

It was reported unofficially that Ethiopians had posted strong forces on three sides of Aduwa and that Minister of War Ras Mula Getta was proceeding there to assume charge of the sector.

Italians Driven Back.

A further report of Ethiopian success asserted that Italians attacking in the Dolo district to the south, where Ethiopia, Italian Somaliland and British Kenya meet, were repulsed and forced to withdraw back across the border.

Officials were reluctant to elaborate on the announcements of Ethiopian successes and gave no additional details of operations in the north.

(An Exchange Telegraph correspondent with the Italian army in Eritrea denied Addis Ababa announcements that Ethiopians had captured Adi Carich. He said strong Ethiopian forces near that border during the week-end had been dispersed by bombing planes.)

Reported Desertions Hailed.

The reported desertion of Italian native troops was regarded as a development of first importance, as Ras Seyyoum has sent trusted men into the Italian lines each day spreading Ethiopian propaganda and urging the black soldiers to "stick to your black brothers and don't aid the Italian slave drivers."

In announcing the Ethiopian penetration of Eritrea, officials said they were worried at the lack of real Italian opposition to the thrust. They feared Italian strategy might be to permit the column to get deep into Italian territory, where it would be cut off and wiped out.

Also they were veering to the feeling Italians would concentrate almost entirely in the north in preference to other fronts, with the purpose of lopping off the rich northern provinces in preference to Ogaden in the south.

U. S. Weighs Request to Italy Not to Bombard Addis Ababa

No Decision Is Announced by State Department Officials on Joining Other Nations in Plea; Flag Marks Legation, Capital Buildings.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

State Department officials yesterday deliberated whether this Government should join with other neutral nations in making representations to Italy that Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, was an unfortified city and, therefore, should not be attacked from the air.

Whether a decision was reached was not made known. Such action was recommended by the diplomatic corps at Addis Ababa at a meeting attended by Cornelius Van H. Engert, American charge d'affaires in Ethiopia. The group decided that each envoy should recommend to his government a joint appeal against aerial bombardment of Addis Ababa should Italians penetrate that far into Ethiopia.

Earlier in the day Secretary of State Cordell Hull revealed that this Government had implied a request that Italy refrain from attacks, from the air or otherwise, against the American Legation at Addis Ababa and buildings occupied by American citizens.

This was done by transmitting to the Italian foreign office, with the request that it be sent to Italian military commanders in East Africa, the information that all buildings sheltering citizens of this country would be marked by huge American flags stretched or painted on their roofs.

Legation Marked.

Engert reported to the department he had instructed all Americans so to mark their property and had taken such action in regard to the American Legation, which is at the other end of the capital from other foreign legations. Buildings housing American hospitals, schools and missions are so located they can be distinguished easily if marked as proposed, Engert explained.

The Associated Press in a cable from Rome reported that the Italian government would relay the information to their military commanders as a matter of "normal procedure" and that it was believed the

Il Duce Feeds African Army More Soldiers

2,000 Troops Sail as Plans for Penalties Go Forward at Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 8.—Premier Mussolini went determinedly ahead with war measures at home today while the League of Nations prepared sanctions against him.

Five vessels sailed from Naples bearing 2,000 more soldiers and cargoes of munitions for the giant war machine in East Africa.

Il Duce, after a review of the 10,000 officers of the nation's 1,200,000 young Fascists who soon will be in the army, told them they must "temper your souls like steel."

During the review there were loosed beside Mussolini great flocks of doves symbolic of peace.

Reports from the front said officers were restraining the eagerness of troops to advance farther into Ethiopia. Artillery fire, however, was used to drive Ethiopians from a fastness in mountains behind Aduwa.

Preparations were made at home to defend coastal cities in the event hostilities result from League actions. Widespread measures already have been adopted by Il Duce in anticipation of economic and financial sanctions.

Italy, experts said, is dependent upon no nation for bread, lighting, transportation, water and fuel.

Girl, 6, Boy, 2, Hit by Autos; Injuries Are Fatal to Virginian

One Child Is Near Death After Accident Here; Former Washington Merchant, Hurt in Week-End Crash, Dies in Hospital.

Florence Herrel, 6, of 802 E street northeast, suffered injuries physicians fear will be fatal when she was struck by an automobile at Eighth and G streets northeast, late yesterday.

The child, police were told, darted from behind a parked car into the path of an automobile driven by Mary Cristarella, 34, of the 500 block of Third street northeast.

Her left thigh was fractured and she suffered concussion of the brain, cuts and bruises. She was taken to Casualty Hospital, where doctors struggled to save her life. The driver was not held.

Two-year-old Jack Barrett, of 1016 Fourth street northeast, suffered a broken leg when he stepped from behind a parked automobile into the path of a car at Fourth and L streets northeast, yesterday. He was taken to Providence Hospital.

Injuries suffered last Sunday when his automobile and a truck collided near White Stone, Va., yesterday caused the death, in Casualty Hospital, of Lyman Williams, 55, of White Stone, formerly a Washington merchant.

Levine was granted a divorce this morning, charging five years' separation. He was married to Grace B. Levine in Baltimore, May 6, 1917. There are two minor children outside the jurisdiction of the court. No property settlement was made, it was said.

Canadian Game Warden Bags Pair as Slayer of 2 'Mounties'

By the Associated Press.

Banff, Alberta, Oct. 8.—Two youthful gunmen suspected of the slaying of three police officers in a mad and bloody dash for freedom through three provinces were shot down today and captured by a lone game warden.

Critically wounded, the pair, Pete Woykin and John Kalmakoff, both Doukhobor farmers from the Arran, Saskatchewan, district, were under police guard in a hospital here tonight.

A third member of the alleged bandit trio, Joe Psnikoff, 21, was shot to death in a police trap near here last night.

The three are accused of slaying Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable J. G. Shaw and Municipal Constable W. Wainwright in Saskatchewan last Friday when they were being taken to jail on a charge of shopbreaking.

An intentive search over the week-end had no results until last night when police near Canmore opened a gun battle with the fugitives, fleeing in an automobile. Sergt. T. S. Wallace, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was fatally wounded and died today. Constable G. C. Harrison was critically wounded.

Woykim and Kalmakoff were forced to abandon their automobile and take to the woods as police posses, aided by bloodhounds, closed in on them.

Laurel Daily Double Pays $441, Largest Mutuel of the Meeting

By Walter Haight.

A limited number of customers stepped up to the pay-off windows at Laurel yesterday afternoon and collected a small fortune for their luck in buying $2 tickets on numbers 3 and 4 in the daily double. Exactly $441.60 was counted out to each holder of a pasteboard which represented the combination of Irish Ted, in the first race, and Happy Inver, in the third race. The pay-off was the largest of the meeting at the Howard County track. Among the possible mutuels displayed after the first race was one of $1,324.90, which represented the entire "double" pool, minus the track's cut and the tax.

The feature race was the Pocahontas, a contest for fillies and mares from 3 years up, and in the finish Tabitha, a sprightly miss of 3, took the measure of Flaming Mamie, a matron of 6 years. Third in the field of five came Best Bid.

Tabitha was a worthy favorite and she rewarded her backers with a $5 mutuel while running in the creditable time of 1:43 1-5.

As has been the case since racing returned to Maryland this fall, turf conditions were ideal and a crowd of 8,000 came out to win and lose and enjoy the air.

Tabitha, a daughter of Victorian, the winner of a Preakness, was in front all the way and withstood several bids to dislodge her before information would be gratefully received by the army as a means of avoiding accidents to United States institutions.

The State Department in July warned Americans in Ethiopia of the anticipated conflict and suggested they prepare to evacuate the country or gather in Addis Ababa. At that time there were 125 Americans listed as being in Ethiopia, most of whom were connected with Seventh Day Adventist Missions. A number were physicians and nurses. Then it was feared that Ethiopians might fail to distinguish among white persons of different nationalities.

These missionary groups took the view that their duty required them to remain in Ethiopia, despite the expected hostilities. Engert last week reported he had ordered three women and six children to leave the country by the first train from Addis Ababa to Djibouti, the seaport of French Somaliland. How many others have left is not known. Since July, however, a number of American newspaper correspondents have entered the country and many of them are at Addis Ababa.

Italian Credit Cut.

Meanwhile, there were no further developments in this country's neutrality program. During the day there came to light a decision of the Effiport-Import Bank, a government agency, against granting any credits for the shipment of goods to Italy—a decision, which while conforming to the Roosevelt neutrality policy, was made in August and was inspired by the dictates of sound business.

In August directors of the bank had before them several applications for loans to finance sales of goods to Italy. At that time it appeared that the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel might have serious consequences and it was decided such loans under the circumstances would be poor business risks. About the same time many private business houses tightened up credit on Italian purchases.

The protest against President's Roosevelt's neutrality pronouncements of the last week-end, sent to him by the Conference on Port Development of the City of New York, Inc., was not expected here to move the Administration from its course.

The protest was based on the contention the President, by his pronouncements, especially his assertion that hereafter American citizens engaging in transactions of "any character" with Italy or Ethiopia, had "banned" trade with Italy. It was held here that this was not so—that the President only had given notice tha tthe United States Government would not become involved in a foreign quarrel because of the activity of American traders.

F. O. B., U. S. A. Plan.

Reports from New York were to the effect that exporters, because of the certainty that the League of Nations would apply sanctions against Italy and the President's pronouncements, were discussing reverting to the World War practice of making sales "f. o. b. American port," thus leaving the buyer to arrange transportation of his purchases and take the risks of war.

Another report was that a large New York department store had instructed its foreign offices to cease purchasing Italian goods. The action, it was said, was inspired by a desire to conform with American policy and resentment in this country against Italy's aggressively belligerent activities.

Secretary Hull took advantage of a visit of a delegation of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs to reiterate his faith in pacific methods of settling international disputes. He urged support of the President's neutrality program.

"Your organization, representing 68,000 business and professional women," the Secretary told the group, "is and can continue to be an influential factor in the development of a public opinion among our people dedicated to the preservation of peace and the promotion of international understanding and good will.

"I am certain that your organization can exercise a far-reaching influence in the propogation of that fundamental postulate of our foreign policy that international disputes can and must be settled by pacific means.

"In these unhappy circumstances when the nations of the world are faced with the brutalities of war on the African Continent, I am convinced that your organization will recognize the importance of the President's proclamation and official statement of October 5 and will accord whole-hearted support to their execution in order that the American people may cotninue to enjoy the blessings of peace."

Trade Gains Foreseen

By the Associated Press.

Nw York, Oct. 8.—Romolo Angelone, commercial attache of the Italian Embassy, said tonight that "any threatening economic measures" taken against Italy by the League of Nations would give the United States an opportunity to gain "a more secure foothold" in the Italian market.

Largest possible increases of American exports to Italy would be in coal, cotton and copper, Angelone said, and other gains would probably result in oil and manufactured goods, he added.

"Repercussions from any threatened economic measures against Italy will be negligible," he said in a prepared statement. "* * * Italy is better prepared than at any time in her history to successfully combat any economic campaign that may be waged against her."

During an interview, Angelone digressed from his prepared statement to add that he saw an "opportunity for the United States to double its market."

Italian dependence upon America for coal will be greatly increased, he added, asserting that the recent subsidy agreement worked out between English coal producers and Italy would necessarily be dropped in case of economic sanctions.

Angelone said he did not expect the United States would be affected by the proposed League measures.

"No repercussions are anticipated from the United States, to which country Italy has long been a good market," the statement said, "being a particularly good customer for raw cotton, oil, metals and several manufactured goods."

Angelone held that American exports to Italy had increased by $4,000,000 in 1935 over 1934. Only about $150,000 of htis was in goods deemed as strictly war materials.

Between You and Me

Government by Remote Control; Mail Service to Cruiser Houston; 12-Day Isolation.

By Raymond Clapper

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8.—Never before in such a foreign crisis as this has an American President been so far away from his desk as Mr. Roosevelt is now—fishing out in the Pacific.

However, the modern-day marvels of radio and airplane transmission of mail enable him to operate almost as promptly and with as complete information as if he were sitting in his circular office adjoining the White House.

Here is how Mr. Roosevelt's remote control actually works. As soon as the cruiser Houston, with the President aboard, moved from the dock at San Diego, White House Secretary Stephen T. Early took a plane for Washington, to serve as liaison officer between the White House and the President at sea. Constant contact is maintained by radio, even to sending to the floating vacation White House a daily digest of the newspapers. Mr. Roosevelt is told what the editorials say, what the commentators say, and even whether he lands on page one, and what play the Hoover speech has received.

Mr. Roosevelt is probably two weeks distant from Washington, by the fastest route that his Secret Service would permit him to use—it has never allowed a President to travel by air. Mr. Roosevelt's last flight was his trip to the Chicago convention to accept the presidential nomination in 1932.

This also is the longest time he or any recent President has been out of touch by mail with Washington. On his Hawaiian cruise last year, Mr. Roosevelt was without mail for about nine days. He is now in the midst of a 12-day stretch without mail.

This is in spite of the heroic efforts of the Postoffice Department to maintain regular mail service between the President and the White House. Whenever the President travels outside of Washington, the postoffice puts a squad of inspectors to work operating a special courier service to exchange pouches of White House mail with the President wherever he may be.

From the time Mr. Roosevelt left Washington until he went aboard the cruiser Houston at San Diego there were handled 15 pouches of presidential mail—that is, only the grade A secret mail—executive orders and legal papers requiring the President's personal signature or examination, signing of commissions such that of Gen. Malin Craig as new chief of staff, which he signed while sitting in his automobile just before he pulled away from his hotel at San Diego.

After Mr. Roosevelt went up the gangplank of the Houston, a small, slender man dashed aboard carrying a small leather bag, about half the size of a regular canvas mail sack. That was H. G. Theurer, postoffice inspector of Washington, who supervises the handling of presidential mail during such trips as this.

After the Houston sailed, Mr. Theurer went to Los Angeles to board the first fast steamer for Balboa, Canal Zone. He will arrive there October 14. Washington will fly the presidential mail to Panama, Mr. Theurer will board a naval plane there with it and fly out to the Houston at sea. The plane will put down in the sea and the pouches will be placed aboard the Houston. Return mail will be taken off and flown back to Washington. This gap, from October 2 to October 14, is the longest time that a President has been out of touch by mail, so far as officials can recall.

A year ago Inspector Theurer flew mail from Honolulu out 750 miles to sea to deliver it to President Roosevelt. A naval plane, accompanied by a convoy plane, made the trip. Then Inspector Theurer flew back to Hawaii, hopped a fast steamer, and was on the dock at Portland, Oreg., with more mail, when Mr. Roosevelt arrived on the Houston. After October 14, naval planes will fly from Balboa every day to deliver mail, received from Washington by Pan-American Airways, to the Houston. No pouch ever travels without a personal courier.

If you ever meet Inspector Theurer, ask him to tell how the British invited him to check up on their postal system. He found that in their postoffice sorting rooms they put letters into the distribution boxes backward. That's the way they had been doing since the days of Good Queen Bess and nobody ever thought of improving on it. Inspector Theurer showed them how we do it. You just shove the letter into the box with the corner card end in first instead of putting it in, as the British were doing, with the stamp corner in first. It takes only half as long the American way. British postal authorities were astonished.

That night orders went throughout the British postal system to let tradition be hanged and stick the letters in the other end first, like the Americans do.

But there's no use telling any more about the efficiencies of the American postal system, or all the service you get for 3 cents; or how, if you forget to put the name of the city on when you address a letter, and have no return address, the postoffice will look in its file of all American city directories and try to locate the town from the street address.

Anyway this has nothing to do with politics. It only makes an argument for the people who want the Government to run everything when everybody knows the Government can't run anything efficiently.

Dr. H. P. Myers Opens Services For Methodists

Conference Begins Today at Staunton; Delegates Arriving.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Oct. 8.—Dr. H. P. Myers, of Lynchburg, delivered the preliminary sermon at Central Methodist Church here last night preparatory to the opening of the 151st annual session of the Baltimore conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Dr. Myers, a native of the Valley of Virginia, most of whose ministerial work has been in the Virginia conference, is a former president of Blackstone College for Girls, at Blackstone, Va. He is also a former pastor of the First Methodist Church in Charlottesville, and came here at the suggestion of Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, who will preside at the conference session, and at the invitation of the Rev. Dr. G. G. Martin, Central's pastor. Dr. Myers spoke here again this evening.

Durin gthe day, Bishop Mouzon, who arrived late yesterday, met his cabinet—the seven presiding elders in the Baltimore conference—and preliminary plans were made for the opening of the conference session.

Referred to the Italo-Ethiopian situation by asking when in all history had the nations of the world "been so conecrned over a war of conquest—Italy's invasion of a smaller, weaker nation. But Italy is going no more than Great Britain, and rance and even our own country, has done in former years. Yet the great nations of the world today are bending every effort to stop the slaughter before the fires of war sperad."

The Rev. Edwin S. Sheepe, jr., who is stationed at Rockville, Md., but who entered the ministry from Central Church, led the opening prayer, being among the first ministers in Staunton for the conference session. The closing prayer was by the Rev. John H. Pearson, of Clarendon, Va., formerly pastor of the Basic Church in Waynesboro.

Apple Shippers Get 'Go Slow' Warning

Supply on British Markets Reported Excessive.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 8.—Marketing experts in the foreign field have cautioned shippers that the supply of apples on the British markets has been excessive and that much of the common storage fruit that has bee nreceived is over-ripe.

As a result of the heavy supplies of apples during the past week, prices dropped. While no immediate relief is in sight, it is reported supplies for this week will be lighter, although still on the heavy side.

Practically every fruit-growing State in the Nation had shipments of apples on the British markets last week, it was learned here. If future exports are moderate, it is believed returns will be satisfactory on a much larger quantity of fruit than was exported last year.

Prices for barreled stock at Liverpool, according to late reports, were West Virginia Jonathans, $3.43 to $3.92; Grimes, 2.45 to $2.94; Virginia Yorks, $5.88 Jonathans, $4.41 to $5.39; Grimes, $2.94 to $3.43; Delicious, $5.52 to 6.19; Bonums, $3.43 to $3.92.

Eritrea Raided By 15,000 Men From Ethiopia

Son-in-Law of Emperor Leads Attack; Capital Reported Seized.

about 100 civilians unable to get places who will have to wait until Wednesday's train to be evacuated.

Cornelius Van H. Engert, American minister, formed a committee of Americans to care for the interests of the American colony. A huge American flag has been spread on the roof of the hotel where most United States citizens live. Hospitals and some private homes have large Red Cross emblems painted on roofs. Other foreigners have attempted to camouflage their roofs with branches of trees.

A Red Cross unit of foreign doctors and nurses has arrived and will hurry soon to the northern front.

Evacuation Ordered.

Addis Ababa, Oct. 8.—Emperor Haile Selassie tonight urged all Ethiopians to evacuate the Italian colony of Eritrea and told his envoy to Rome to ask for his passports.

The bearded little liege of Africa's last sovereign empire was represented by his aids as believing major sanctions will break down Italy's defiance while the armies of Il Duce break their skulls on the rock-ribbed mountain citadels of Ethiopia, which no invader yet has penetrated.

The Emperor ordered ..agadras Afevork Ghevre Yesus, his minister to Rome, to ask for his passports; told the Ethiopian consul at Asmara, Eritrea, to withdraw, and asked all Ethiopians to leave Eritrea.

Then Selassie proclaimed that since all Italians were leaving his nation the remaining Europeans must be considered friends and treated accordingly.

The belief that Great Britain, despite her arms embargo, is aiding Ethiopia by secret arms shipments through the Sudan and British Somaliland persisted here.

Lights were ordered extinguished nightly in Addis Ababa as the Emperor took precautions against air raids. Inhabitants were ordered to draw their curtains, evacuate the streets and refrain from using flashlights. Traffic was ordered suspended after dark.

Government officials would not confirm reports that the holy city of Aksum, in northern Ethiopia, once the capital of the empire, had fallen. Reported defeats on the Tigrean front, likewise in northern Ethiopia, were denied.

"Fifty armed Eritreans, under the command of an important chief, arrived at Makale, south of Aduwa, with Italian machine guns," an official announced. "In the Agame region, 200 armed Eritreans surrendered to authorities."

(The League of Nations was informed that Ethiopia has asked the Italian minister to Addis Ababa and his staff to leave the country at once. The request was announced in a note to the League from Tecle Hawariate, the Ethiopian delegate. Hawariate said misuse of the legation's radio station for "the creation of internal disorders" was the reason for the ejection.)

Many Are Turned Back.

So great was the crowd of foreigners, including American women and children, trying to board the the train for Djibouti, French Somaliland, that all could not be given seats and many were turned back. Officials of the railroad were forced to detach the locomotive in order to get the platform cleared.

The train departed after half an hour's delay. On it were Italian consuls from Dessye and Debra Markos, who quarreled with Ethiopian customs officials over the examination of baggage.

A dispatch from Deridawa, Ethiopia, said 200 French white troops arrived there to protect foreigners and the Franco-Ethiopian Railroad from Addis Ababa to Djibouti.

cities as Naples, Genoa and Bari. Coast artillery and anti-aircraft units opened an intensive period of training.

Mussolini made an effort to show the "good side" of his Ethiopian war to his people and the world to offset Geneva's criticism.

"The sword and civilization march together," said official and semi-official descriptions of the four days of fighting in Africa and the two days of preparation for the next offensive.

Casualties were mentioned for the first time in today's communique. They were asserted to be very small to Italians, but heavy among Ethiopians.

That, and a statement hundreds of prisoners have been taken, was the only reference to the horrors of war.

Aduwa Being Organized.

Ethiopian forces have made several efforts to recapture Aduwa since its fall, a government spokesman said, but they were consistently driven off. He said the city was being rapidly organized as an Italian stronghold.

The spokesman "officially denied" Italy is warring on civilians and said specific orders to Italian troops in this respect have been "scrupulously obeyed," so much so that many tribesmen have welcomed the Italian troops as a relief from the domination of their chieftains.

He was bitter regarding League of Nations developments, declaring "no tribunal in any civilized country in the world would have taken such arbitrary procedure as that taken at Geneva."

"The Italian public," he added, "feels that this was a manifestation of anti-Italian. I might say anti-Fascist, sentiment. It was very partial and it was with great regret that the Ialian public observed it. Italy is at a loss to understand it, but quite calm as it awaits further developments."

To Continue "Co-operation."

Whether these developments would force Italy to leave the League the spokesman would not indicate other than to recall Mussolini's recent declaration that Italy would continue to co-operate with the League until the League made it impossible.

Italy feels that the United States at least is giving it a sporting break on the Ethiopian question and the League complications.

"Italy appreciates very much President Roosevelt's neutrality proclamation," the spokesman said. "Italy's attitude toward such a policy as that declared by the United States Government is what it asks of everyone."

Even Roosevelt's declaration that a state of war exists between Italy and Ethiopia failed to lessen the Italian government's feeling of cordial appreciation. The spokesman passed over that issue with "I am unable to comment on the views taken of Italy's military activities elsewhere in the world, except to repeat that in Italy at least we regard the campaign of our African army as a military operation for the protection of our colonies."

Official Statement.

Rome, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—The text of the official statement in Rome today follows:

During the day of October 7 talian troops succeeded in systematizing the position they occupied outside Aduwa and in reorganizing their lines of communications and services.

Numerous engineer corps divisions and imposing masses of laborers have continued their work in the rear of the troops in order that auto columns can reach the front lines regularly.

An attempted attack on Umm Hagar was repulsed by Askaris troops from the Tessenei region.

The populations of occupied zones, in the shade of the Italian tricolor, a symbol of civilization, have returned to their normal courses of life.

In operations during the last few days, many hundreds of prisoners have been captured as well as much war material. Losses of the national army, in view of the excellence of our materials, were minimum. The morale of Italian troops is excellent.

He was a member of the Order of Red Men and the Junior Order of American Mechanics. For a number of years he had been an official of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Galestown.

Surviving are six children: Howard L., Walter E. and Otis M. Hastings, and Mrs. John C. Wootten, of Galestown; Mrs. Elmer McAllister, of Vienna, and J. Edwin Hastings, of Baltimore. He also leaves three brothers, Robert L. Hastings, of Hurlock; Edward Hastings, of Eldorado, and Richard W. Hastings, of Baltimore.

Michael J. Creegan.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Midland, Md., Oct. 8.—Funeral services were held this morning at St. Joseph's Catholic Church for Michael J. Creegan, 70, a former bailiff of Midland. Burial was at Frostburg.

He is survived by his wife and the following children: Miss Margaret Creegan, Baltimore; Misses Catherine and Mary Creegan, Washington; Miss Patricia Creegan, of Midland, and Miss LeRoy Crowe, of this city.

Mr. Creegan, once a prominent racer and baseball player of this section, worked for several years in the insurance business prior to his retirement about seven years ago.

Mrs. Martha McDonald.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 8.—Mrs. Martha Esther McDonald, native of Frederick County and long a resident of this city, died late today of heart disease. She was active in church circles and was a member of the Patriotic Daughters of America.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Gussie Finnigan, of Stephenson, Va., and Mrs. Alice Orror, of Middletown, Va., and two brothers, Benjamin Cline, of Baltimore, and Jacob Cline, of Shenandoah County.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Thursday from Market Street Methodist Church.

Rabid Foxes Bite Three Virginians

By the Associated Press.

Bristol, Tenn., Oct. 8.—A Virginia fox, maddened by rabies, was reported to have bitten a "wolfe."

Dr. E. C. Harper, director of the Southwest Virginia Health Department at Abingdon, said Miss Byrd McGavock, Lee County health nurse, reported crazed foxes had bitten three persons in the county.

One was a "Mr. Wolfe" who was attacked while cutting wood at his home. The fox appeared suddenly, gashed his leg and quickly disappeared in the underbrush. A "Mr. Pierson" later was bitten. He seized and strangled the fox. A woman was bitten while milking, the report said. All three are being given treatment to prevent rabies.

Dr. Harper said rabies was discovered in the head of a fox slain near Pennington Gap and it was believed an epidemic of the disease existed among foxes and other small animals of the county.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

They're the Top.

New York, Oct. 8.

Jack Benny, because he proved to all performers that they could get to the top without using smutty or suggestive material.

Eleanor Powell, because she's still the same nice kid she was before she clicked in flickers.

TUCKER.

Fred Astaire, because he brought a youthful freshness and charm to a screen that had the saturation point in sophistication. He's sophisticated, but he's nice.

Sid Solomon, at the Central Park Casino, because he's never tossed in the sponge or taken the count on one knee, although O. O. McIntyre and myself are the only writers who've given him a break.

Peggy Joyce, because she's never failed to send a weekly check to her mother in Norfolk, Va. (Sure, I know you're supposed to be good to your mother—but I know a lot of peopole who aren't!)

Walt Disney, for the countless hours of entertainment he's given all of us with his Mickey Mouse-eroos.

Joe Louis, because he's never let down the public. Up to the time he's counted out, the Detroiter will be in there giving us a receipt in full.

Mrs. Anne Lindbergh and Lindy, because they didn't yield to the urging of friends and move to England, after the kidnaping. "It's my country, right or wrong," said Lindy.

Eileen Wenzel, the "Vanities" eyeful, who didn't let the Ehret millions intimidate her—and collected a well-deserved $90,000 verdict.

Peg-leg Bates, crippled when he was a lad in Alabama, who gamely went on to become the greatest hoofer on the Broadway scene—with one leg. He's an inspiration to any youngster who comes into a two-legged and twq-armed world with a frightful physical handicap.

Louis K. Sidney and Boris Morros, because they team together brilliantly to aid every worthy charity (and L. K. Sidney, Loew biggie, has turned down as high as $7,500 to stage the Electrical Exposition). He does it for nothing for charity.

Sophie Tucker, because she has been a grand influence in show business and has helped countless hundreds of kids.

Claire Ruth, a former Ziegfeld beauty, who married Babe Ruth, and instead of squandering his money, forced him (and I mean forced) to put his earnings into a trust fund. They won't play any benefit for the Babe, thanks to her.

Ginger Rogers, the former vaudeville hoofer, who went places on her own.

Ethel Merman, Caleb Bragg's former stenographer who used to work in cheap little restaurants after office hours, because she believed that some day she'd be a singer.

Hanah Williams, a great rhythm singer in her own right, who retired from the Broadway scene completely, content to go into the shadows as Mrs. Jack Dempsey. But she's proved a fine wife and mother.

Frazee Sisters, because they've lived up to everything I said about 'em when I persuaded Broadway to bring them on from Chicago. They're a sure bet for big time musicals and flickers.

Al Rosen, manager of Loew's State Theater; Bob Weitman, at Paramount; Robert Emmet, at the Capitol; Ed Burke, at the Roxy—because as the theater managers of Broadway, they've done their level best to maintain a high house level—and they've done it.

Dave Vine, greatest teller of dialect stories on Stem stages, because he was the first one who cracked down Joe Louis' famous dead pan and made him roar. Hype Igoe and Walter St. Denis wil ltell you that it was Vine, at the RKO Palace in Chicago, who gave Louis his first experience with laughter.

Irene Castle, because she turned from Paris gowns to a very sincere interest in dogs.

Burns and Allen, the Jack Bennys, and Joe E. Browns, who adopted youngsters—to give these foundlings the chance their adopters never had.

Ruth Etting, because she never went Broadway. Rain or shine, she's the same nice girl who came out of a Nebraska small town.

Jack Waldron, because he went to the Hollywood for a two-week engagement and is now in his thirty-second week. Class will tell.

Mrs. Bruno Hauptmann, who regardless of everything else, stuck to her curious husband—because she loved him. You have to admire that kind of loyalty.

Jewish Review to Make Appearance October 18

A new weekly publication, the Washington Jewish Review, will make its appearance October 18, according to announcement yesterday by David Mondzac, editor and publisher.

The paper will be published in the National rPess Building. At one time Mondzac was managing editor of the National Jewish Ledger. He has named A. A. Alloy business manager of the Review.

Find Out
From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take is SAFE

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations.

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

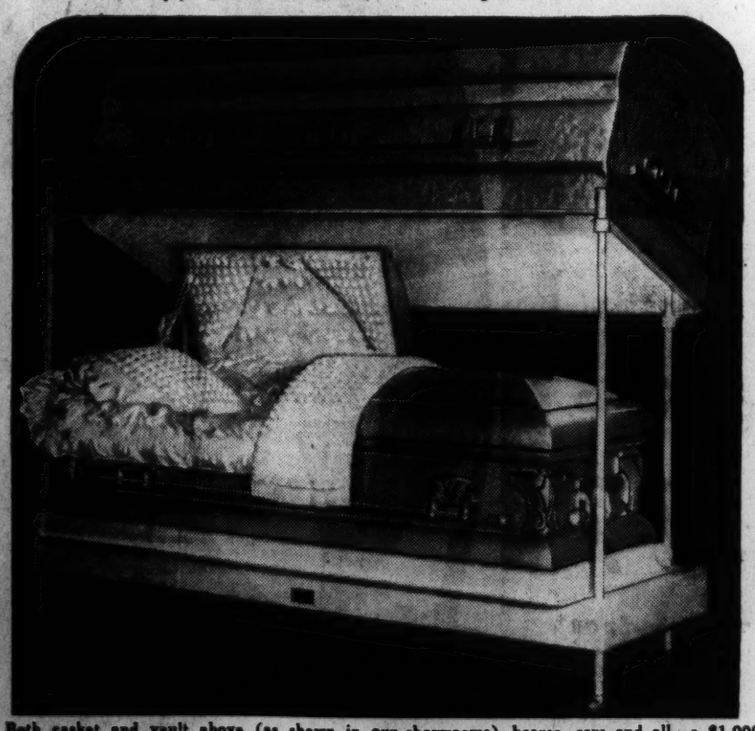
A display of water tight air sealed Vault and Casket by Chambers At prices most anyone can afford

W. W. CHAMBERS

I claim the world's greatest values by one of the world's greatest undertakers—one of great progress who has furnished more funerals in 10 years per population than any other undertaker in the world. This is not a mere ad but a statement of concrete fact. Chambers is "One of the Largest Undertakers in the World." Complete funerals at one-half the old-time undertaker's price. For example of value look at this unit pictured below—suitable for a king, queen, or a statesman. A $1,000 service for only $350 complete.

This metal casket vault includes hearse, 3 limousines, all service, use of parlors, chapel and music free, also paper notices. A wonderful funeral for those who can afford the best. But don't forget, we still have a funeral complete, with parlors, chapel and music free, also paper notices. A wonderful funeral and a good one for..... $75



Both casket and vault above (as shown in our showrooms), hearse, cars and all—a $1,000 service for only $350.

MAKE WAY FOR ROADMASTER!

This ROADMASTER Series 80 six-passenger Sedan—320-horsepower, 131-inch wheelbase—$1255
But prices at Flint. Fenderwells extra. All Buick prices include Safety Glass throughout as standard equipment

Slip behind that wheel, touch toe to the gas treadle, instantly you'll see why.

It's like nothing in a motor car you ever tooled through traffic or headed down a continental highway—driving it you live in a different world.

It's styled for a party—moded to the latest tasteful minute—but it's boss of time, distance, straightaway, curve, level, grade, the open road!

There's thirty-three years of religiously stern quality manufacture brought to dazzling focus in the sleek beauty and flashing action of this sensational car.

There isn't a bolt or a rivet or a forging or a strut anywhere in it that doesn't have durable Buick quality hammered into its inmost fibre.

It's featherlight on control, electric in response, steady and stable in flight as a sound ship, with the poised balance of a fly-rod.

It's a sweetheart in the graciousness of its look and obedience, but it takes a masculine word to name the rich exuberance of its power.

Don't take our say-so—come drive it yourself—see what $14,500,000 worth of new tools, dies and factory re-equipment, and 10,000 veteran Buick workmen have contrived, to give you new value, new utility, new thrill.

ROADMASTER!—that's what you'll say when you try this phenomenal performer, built to pace the whole motor car field in the year to come!

YOU CAN AFFORD THE NEW BUICK

England Urges Solid Support For Sanctions

Other Nations Called Upon to Back League Moves Against Italy.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Geneva, Oct. 8.—League penalties against Italy began to take form today in private conversations among diplomats.

Britain took the lead in attempting to whip into line the nations with "doubtful" attitudes on sanctions. Capt. R. Anthony Eden, vigorous young British secretary for League affairs, was the busiest man at Geneva.

Besides a long luncheon conference with French Premier Pierre Laval, Eden talked with Baron Emeric Pfluegel, of Austria; Dr. Salvador de Madariaga, of Spain; Foreign Minister Edouard Benes, of Czechoslovakia, and Foreign Minister James Maximos, of Greece.

Other members of the British delegation also were active. Lord Cranbourne was closeted with Laszlo Bevelics, of Hungary, and the British treasury economic experts, R. J. Hawatry and J. J. Wills, conferred with Robert Coulondre, French foreign office economist.

The British drive was understood to be directed at agreement on punishing Italy so severely for her unprovoked attack upon Ethiopia that Premier Benito Mussolini would be compelled soon to sue for peace.

Austria, among others, was reported seeking limited exemption from financial and economic measures against her neighbor. Although Austria values the League as a guarantor of the territorial status quo in Central Europe, she can not overlook the fact that Italy is a valuable market and that Mussolini has stood as an invaluable opponent to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's hope of uniting Germany and Austria.

Session Tomorrow.

It is important that these conflicts be straightened out before the Assembly meets at 5 p. m. tomorrow to follow the Council's lead in condemning Italy and voting to punish her by financial and economic means.

A plan to boycott foreign purchases of Italian fruits and wines, as one phase of economic sanctions, was understood to have made the project more acceptable to France, who probably would profit most from the diversion of Italian trade.

It was reported reliably that Britain already has taken steps to sequester British ships containing refrigerator space. This was construed as indicating the grave view Britain takes of the possibility that enforcement of sanctions may lead to an Anglo-Italian conflict.

Germany informally has responded to British feelers, it is understood, explaining that she is inclined to cooperate at least passively in League measures, but that as the largest supplier of foreign-made goods to Italy she must have compensation for loss of gold and foreign currency. The British are said to be seeking a British "foreign currency compensation guarantee" as the price of Germany's participation.

The assembly is expected to follow closely yesterday's council procedure, in which each nation individually signified its opinion of the committee of six's report finding Italy guilty of violating the covenant.

A scheduled session of the council was abandoned when Baron Pompeo Aloisi decided not to deliver a verbal reply to yesterday's council action, which held Italy guilty of aggression and bound the 13 council members to enforce sanctions against the Fascist government.

Aloisi, instead, sent a letter to the League secretariat deploring the Council's approval of the Committee of Six report, which put the Council on record against Italian aggression, before Italy had been offered an opportunity to state its attitude in detail. Council President Enrique Ruiz Guinzau explained yesterday that the bloodshed in Ethiopia, which had been going on for five days, would not permit further delay.

Reservations Made.

Aloisi regretted that "methods in sharp contradiction to the most elementary rules of all procedure had been adopted for the first time by the League of Nations against my country." Italy makes complete reservations regarding the Council's action, Aloisi said.

Delegates of 50 nations were assembled tonight for tomorrow's Assembly session, which is expected to ratify the Council's action promptly. The Assembly is expected to appoint a League committee, including Italy's neighbors, such as Austria, Jugoslavia, Rumania, etc., to recommend specific economic measures to be undertaken collectively.

Mother Confesses Poison Slayings

Perkins Claims Violence Ended In Labor Rows

Sees Industry and Labor Both Turning to U. S. to Avoid Strife.

fact that the durable-goods industries are forging to the front," she said. "These industries, as a rule, are the first to suffer from a depression and the last to recover. The latest reports to the United States Department of Labor on construction activity, steel production, automobile machinery and machine tools, in particular, leave no doubt that these industries, which are so significant in the entire picture of any recovery, have actually made the turn."

The Labor Department chief's message was the high spot in two brief convention sessions, but behind the scenes warring factions were drawing their lines and making secret alliances for showdown fights on the building trades department row and the industrial union issue.

Whether workers in a mass production industry should be divided among craft unions or organized into one big union was the issue that promised to provide the biggest scrap at the convention.

Eleven delegates introduced resolutions today calling for the federation to adopt an industrial unionization policy. More were expected. Automobiles, linoleum, rubber, cement, brewery and Western metal mine delegates were among those to demand that the craft unions stay out of their industries.

Craft unionists privately claimed that the one-big-union men didn't have a chance to change the federation's present policy of allowing the craft unions to go into the mass production industries in which the council felt the interest of the workers would best be served by craft unions.

Lewis to Make Fight.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and leader of the Industrial Unionists, was ready, however, to make a fight for support of their contention that only by industrial unionization could mass production workers gain any strong bargaining power. Miss Perkins warned the federation that labor's increased rights under the Wagner labor disputes act brought with them increased responsibilities.

"If labor's rights are defined by law and by government, then certain obligations will of course, be expected of wage earners and I am sure there is a sober recognition of this on the part of all responsible leaders of the Great American labor movement," she said. "Certainly they have furnished repeated evidence of it in the last year by their actions and by the policies they have formulated.

"Labor is qualified and competent to define its obligations and to impose such discipline as may be necessary from time to time. It should not be imposed from without. Self-imposition of discipline is the basis of all professional codes of ethics in modern society. Labor is now imposing upon itself those rules of discipline and self-government so necessary for the maintenance of its improved status in the community."

Nazis Close Meat Shops.

Berlin, Oct. 8 (AP).—Police today closed five meat shops for charging in excess of the fixed maximum prices, and warned other dealers against such transgressions. The butter shortage appeared improved, but fruit supplies are still limited. Cheerful interviews with housewives over the food supplies were broadcast.

Mrs. Creighton also found out about it.

And Applegate found out, the confession recounted, that Mrs. Creighton really had poisoned her brother, Charles R. Avery, when they lived in Newark, N. J. She said she did it because he was "a cripple and a burden to the family."

After being acquitted of his slaying, incidentally, Mrs. Creighton, who is 36, was tried for the poison death of her mother-in-law and again was acquitted. Her confession denied this poisoning.

So Applegate, according to Littleton's version of the confession, wanted his wife out of the way because she knew about Ruth and also because she was so fat—she had weighed 260 pounds, but had been taking tablets to reduce.

Mrs. Creighton, the confession said, also desired her death because Applegate then would be free to marry her daughter if she could bring it about. In addition, the document continued, Applegate threatened to expose her in connection with her brother's death.

Then came the eggnogg. Mrs. Creighton mixed it, she said, and Applegate dropped some powders into it and took it to his wife. That night Mrs. Creighton herself, Littleton said, placed a "large dose" of the poison in a glass of milk for Mrs. Applegate.

The woman died the next day, her death at first was ascribed to a heart attack. It was only when a detective living in the neighborhood heard "rumors," their source and nature not specified, that an investigation was started.

Applegate, who had professed innocence, was arrested on a charge of assaulting Ruth. As a result of the alleged confession, however, Littleton said he would seek first degree murder indictments when the Nassau County grand jury meets Friday.

Creighton is held as a material witness, but authorities said he had no connection with the alleged murder.

The three children are being cared for by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Assistant Prosecutor Joseph Conlon, of Newark, was authority for the statement that Mrs. Creighton could not be placed in double jeopardy by reopening the case of her brother's death.

LACE WEEK

October 7th to 12th inclusive

Woodward & Lothrop, knowing the desire of all women to be decorative and lovely—to be surrounded by lovely decorative things—and knowing, too, the immeasurable appeal, the decorativeness of LACE, has brought together from this country and abroad, the loveliest of LACES. Everything from lingerie to evening gowns—from a tiny lace doily to a magnificent lace banquet cloth—from sheer web-like laces to sturdy lace for sportswear—and they are ready for you and your home now.

LACE makes its fashion debut

—in countless charming ways. In the gilet of a velvet frock (in an evening gown, for misses, of great chic—a Renaissance blue threaded with silver, $69.75, from a collection of lace gowns, $16.95 to $150). As the trimming for exquisite satin lingerie (there is a charming new gown gathered to a high neckline, $8.95)—as the loveliest part of trousseau lingerie—as a negligee (one particularly chic, of angel-skin lace with a glint of silver, $39.50)—as the very foundation of your wardrobe, (lace-Lastex and satin girdle, $15). As the chic accessory—a bit of lace neckwear, a handkerchief, even chiffon-lace stockings. And, by the yard, silk laces, synthetic laces—cotton laces, metal-threaded laces, and sketched, a brown cire lace, $8 a yard.

LACE READY-TO-WEAR FASHIONS, THIRD FLOOR
LACE, BY THE YARD, FIRST FLOOR

LACE—and its part in home decoration

—is quite as interesting a story as its part in fashion. Here we find Lace at the windows playing a most decorative role. From Switzerland come the Irish point curtains—from the modern machines come weaves that are new, different, modern—a popular type, the Nottingham and the Chantilly weaves (sketched, Chantilly type, at $7.50 pair), beautifully reproduced. A revival of lace spreads, one very exquisite thing in Princess Lace is to be found in the Art Embroidery section, $65. And at the table, Lace again finds smart expression—including the Venice lace (Chinese), filet and cutwork laces, and filet laces—prices in the group from $7.95 to $95.

Jobs Are Seen For Hundreds In Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 8.—Fall building operations are booming, with prospects for employment for hundreds of skilled workers throughout the winter.

Besides a half dozen homes now under construction, work will be started within two weeks on the old Washington County Hospital Building, which will be converted into an administration building. This work will start soon after patients have been moved to the new hospital building about October 20. About $75,000 will be spent on improvements to this building.

The Victor Silk Hosiery Co. has announced purchase from the Victor Products Corporation of the brick factory building, which it has been leasing since February. Construction o fa new unit adjacent, about twice the size o fthe present brick building, is planned. Employment for about 100 more workers will be provided when this building is completed.

Another large private construction project is expected to be announced when the name of the purchaser of the old Hagerstown Bank Building is made known. Approval of the sale by the court is expected within a few days. The purchaser is a Chicago concern. The sale was made to an individual, but it was indicated that the site was sought by a concern which plane a large store building.

Hagerstown's new postoffice building, which cost approximaately $150,000, is nearing completion and is expected to be ready for occupancy January 1. A large garage building on Route 40, erected by the Nolan Motor Co. is also nearing completion.

A number of smaller private projects are in progress. A large new addition to the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation plant here was recently completed.

"Camels don't get your Wind"

SAY THE DETROIT TIGERS 1935 WORLD CHAMPIONS

19 OUT OF 22 OF THE TIGERS SMOKE CAMELS

● Detroit walks off with baseball's best girl!

Today Detroit glories in its first World Championship! These 1935 Tigers have punched out a story of courage and energy that stands among the masterpieces.

It takes the finest "edge" of athletic condition to win the baseball championship of the world. What do the Tigers say about smoking? Here's Mickey Cochrane, dynamic Tiger manager: "One thing the team agree on is their choice of cigarettes—Camels. 19 of the 22 regulars smoke Camels. The Tigers say they can smoke Camels all they want because Camels are so mild that they don't get their wind or upset their nerves."

How about taste? Let's see. Jo-Jo White says: "To me, Camels always taste better." "Camels have a fragrance and aroma all their own," declares Bill Rogell. "They taste better," Owen agrees. And Walker: "Camels never wear out their welcome with me!"

Camels had to be really mild to earn such fame! You'll like their mildness too. Camels never upset your nerves or tire your taste.

PETE FOX (right): "I can smoke as many Camels as I want and still stay in tiptop shape."

THE TIGERS "BIG FOUR" PITCHERS

Beauty Expert Urges Simple Plan for Face

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S ONE beauty authority we know of who maintains that simple face treatments are by far the best.

"Cleanliness," she says, "is the first fundamental. If the skin is kept scrupulously clean, if the pores are freed of waste matter, excess oils, and fatty acids, then it's ten to one you'll have a smooth, clear complexion."

It is her belief that high tension living has robbed women of the time to spend hours applying first this and that to their skins. They must have some thorough, easy and simple routine to follow and then results will be forthcoming.

She strongly advocates cleansing the face with a good complexion soap and brush. "Because," she says, "the oil glands may work overtime and drain on the pores, coarsening and enlarging them. The skin needs outside stimulus and abrasive measures to keep the pores invisible. I find a good brushing is the best means to urge them on to normal activity."

She has designed an excellent complexion brush with bristles soft yet resilient and placed so they cover every crevice on the skin. With this she offers an enormous cake of excellent soap non-drying to the skin, and certainly in no way irritating. This set of brush and soap now sells for only 5 cents more than the brush alone used to cost.

Long-Lasting Lipstick.

LOOKING for a lipstick in a crowded dresser drawer is often like the proverbial search for a needle in a haystack. Not so, however, with the new model put out by a certain cosmetic concern.

This lipstick is outrageously large! Superbly so! Furthermore, it's a real beauty. The case, available in several colors, is conspicuous for the regal crown top. The lipstick itself is ideal. It spreads smoothly and stays on for ages. And there's enough to last ad infinitum!

Thermometers for the Home.

YOU MAY circumvent colds, chills, and sore throats, and numerous other ills in winter's wake if you regulate the temperature of your room. Make sure that it isn't too cold, but at the same time avoid a hothouse atmosphere. The best way of taking out this temperature insurance is to buy one of those dependable wall or desk thermometers selling now in a downtown store for as little as $1.

These small, ingenious gadgets look at first glance quite like a clock in modern design. They may be counted on to tell you the true temperature story.

Party Sandwiches.

AWAY WITH a number of party troubles! Why should you run up your grocer bill, and spend hours in your kitchen laboring over dainty tea delicacies when there's a certain lady who makes it her business to do this bothering for you?

Just call her up and tell her what you want, and she'll see to the rest. And, my, what dainty sandwiches she does make! "Dee-dees," she calls them. Delicious little pinwheels with colored filling, light, fluffy rolls stuffed with some melt-in-your mouth goody, open faced sandwiches that are works of art, rolled sandwiches that taste as good as they look, miniature sweet buns topped with marmalade, and, oh, such an infinite variety!

This expert party specialist would like 48 hours' notice. If you order 300 of the "dee-dees" she delivers them free of charge. Otherwise there's a 25-cent fee, unless you call for them.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

'First Ladies' of Italy, Ethiopia Offer Contrast

MENTION Haille Selassie and a dual picture arises—the bearded, dreamy-eyed Emperor of Ethiopia beside the portly, lavishly robed "Queen of Kings."

Mention Benito Mussolini and you visualize a single face—the stern, massive-jawed profile of Il Duce.

This reaction to the rulers of the two countries on which the eyes of the world are now turned well illustrates the parts the "first ladies" of Ethiopia and Italy are playing in the struggle.

Signora Mussolini is still in the background, as indeed she has been ever since her husband became a world figure. Selassie's empress, Waizeru Mennen, is not only in the news photographs, but is said to be ever at her husband's elbow urging the soft-spoken "Lion of Judah" on to bolder measure in defense of his kingdom.

The personalities of the two women afford a striking contrast.

Signora Mussolini, or Donna Rachele as she is known, has seldom been photographed. The few pictures taken of her show her to be an attractive, motherly looking woman with an ample waistline—though not so ample by any means as that of the Empress of Ethiopia. She has softly waved hair and a kindly expression.

Remains in the Home.

In pursuance of her husband's theory that woman's place is the home, Signora Mussolini has always remained there. The family of Il Duce has been a thing apart from his official life. During the first seven years of his power he kept his wife and children at their modest home in Forli.

Signora Mussolini has always shrunk from social and official life and has devoted herself to her household and the rearing of her five children. She shared her husband's early struggles and when he became an official figure conducted herself so discreetly that she won the respect of hostile critics who at first whispered about that she had been a peasant and a laundress and had gone barefoot much of her life. She has never mixed in her husband's political life.

A different story is that of Ethiopia's Empress. Claiming descent from Cleopatra and the Queen of Sheba, she combines in her portly person not only the glamour but also the force and brilliance of her famous forebears.

Gifted with uncommon intelligence and astuteness, she is one of Haile Selassie's most trusted advisers and she has backed him stanchly in his decisions to defy Mussolini. In the early stages of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, she addressed an appeal to the women of the world to pray for peace.

No Discord in 23 Years.

The Ethiopian Empress also knows the secret of charm, for she has been married to Haile Selassie 23 years, during which time, it is said, the couple has never had a quarrel. He is her fourth husband, and she is his only wife, for the Emperor, like most high-caste Ethiopians, is monogamous. Selassie and Waizeru have six children, three sons and three daughters.

Although short in stature, the 41-year-old Empress appears to dwarf her husband because of her enormous girth. The gorgeous costume and jewelry she wears make her seem even more portly than she is. Her robes are of heavy brocade studded with precious stones. Her slender, artificially reddened fingers are studded with gems and around her neck she wears a magnificent golden necklace, which, it is said, once belonged to the Queen of Sheba.

Waizeru Mennen is a light chocolate brown in color, and when she ventures outside the palace walls, attendants hold over her head a great red ceremonial umbrella, to protect her delicate complexion from the burning rays of the African sun.

House Run on Simple Scale.

Although the royal couple has immense revenues from far-flung Ethiopian estates, the Empress prefers to run her household on a simple scale. Only on important state occasions does she entertain lavishly, and then her dinner service of solid gold is brought forth in all its dazzling splendor.

Like the Emperor, Waizeru prefers European food, which she has fed to her by her attendants, for in the eyes of the Ethiopians she would contaminate herself if her royal fingers came in contact with ordinary food.

The Empress has her own imperial court, consisting of her own court chamberlain, royal jesters, ladies-in-waiting, flunkies, chamberlains and men-at-arms, and she has her own magnificent crown jewels as well. Her chief lady-in-waiting is a German who has lived in Ethiopia for many years.

"Waizeru" means literally "lady of quality." The daughter of a provincial prince, the Empress has a dignified and aristocratic bearing. She is reserved, modest and of few words. She was educated by private tutors.

SALAD MENUS for TODAY

A Variation of Mayonnaise Dressing Brings Out Carrots' Flavor.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE TWO-SALAD a day routine will never become monotonous if you vary your salad dressings. Each type of salad requires a different type of dressing. There are but three basic kinds of salad dressing; namely, mayonnaise made from egg and oil, French dressing made from oil and lemon juice or vinegar, and a cooked dressing prepared from eggs, vinegar, and thickening. Each of these dressings, however, has numerous attractive variations, and each variation can be used to enhance the flavor of a different kind of salad.

The grated carrot salad suggested in today's luncheon menu is served with a variation of mayonnaise especially blended to bring out its best flavor. The dinner salad of greens will be more attractive with the suggested variation of French dressing than if plain French dressing were to accompany it.

The club dressing is prepared by adding two tablespoons chopped currants, 2 tablespoons chopped raisins and 1 tablespoon chopped nuts to a basic recipe for mayonnaise.

The Parisian dressing can be prepared by adding two tablespoons chopped green pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped red pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped celery, ½ tablespoon chopped onion and ½ tablespoon chopped parsley to the basic recipe for French dressing.

Use of Tobacco During Youth Held Harmful

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WHEN the tobacco plant was first introduced into Europe it was valued not so much as a pleasing sedative as for its supposed medicinal properties. It was hailed as a remedy for every disease. It is related that Jean Nicot, the French Ambassador to Portugal in 1560, sent Catherine de Medici some powdered tobacco to relieve her continual headaches. Because of the reputed success of the powder numerous names were attached to it, such as queen's herb, ambassador's herb, and finally Nicot-ine. It did not take long for enthusiasm about its health-giving properties to subside, although an infusion of tobacco as an ingredient of certain prescriptions continued for many years.

Sir Francis Drake brought the plant to England in 1585, but Sir Walter Raleigh, who "took a pipe of tobacco a little before he went to the scaffolde," was responsible for spreading the habit among the courtiers. Although the practice was strongly opposed by church and state, and smokers were threatened with severe penalties, the popularity of tobacco spread with amazing rapidity throughout Europe.

According to Oviedo, who visited America shortly after its discovery by Columbus, the word "tobacco" was attached originally to a smoking tube used by the Indians.

Tribute Paid by Writers.

The "weed" did not escape laudation by poets and essayists, and Spenser in his "Faerie Queene" calls it "divine tobacco." Among its early advocates were those who claimed that it allayed mental irritation. Samuel Johnson is said to have remarked to Boswell that since smoking has become more prevalent among the respectable, middle classes in England, suicides were less frequent. He also regretted that he had not acquired the habit, as he considered the soothing influence of the pipe would have been beneficial in relieving his attacks of melancholy. "It fills the mind with pleasing visions and the heart with kindly feelings."

The horrible physical effects of smoking have been held up to generation after generation of American youth, and much of the teaching against the practice has been about as unsound as can well be imagined. Within recent years, however, scientific data that cannot be brushed aside must be considered and given serious thought.

Nicotine is a virulent poison, and from 1 to 4 per cent of pure tobacco leaf will be nicotine. Some of this substance is absorbed in smoking, depending on how quickly the body builds a defense against the poison. Personal idiosyncrasy and adaptability are factors.

Effect Greatest on Youths.

No one can gainsay the satisfaction or mental relaxation that attends smoking. Nevertheless, as with a food, its use may be carried to the point where toxic symptoms manifest themselves. Many eminent investigators state that the conditions known as thromboangiitis obliterans, Buerger's disease, and other forms of blood vessel disease, particularly of the extremities, are due to the use of tobacco.

Nevertheless competent observers believe that moderate smoking is not essentially deleterious to the average adult. On the other hand, there are some persons who cannot indulge in tobacco even in slight degree without exhibiting nervous symptoms.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

YOU CAN SEND to Brussels for your laces—to Venice for your glass—to France for your china and—to Siam for your white elephants. But for the best chair in the world, stay right at home. Americans are sitting prettier than anybody we know about. We've never quite figured out what was the matter with European chairs except that it is hard to find one made for curling up and relaxing on the small of your back. Now it's easy enough to say what's the matter with the chairs of Japan—they just aren't. You use your own anatomy and balance on your knees. A Japanese lady is quite likely to sit all day on a train bench with her heels under her and facing backward just because she finds it so uncomfortable to sit with her legs dangling the way we do. Anyway count chairs and sofas among your list of blessings.

• • • •

J. M. J. WRITES: I am going to have my living room done over. The colors will have to harmonize with a mulberry rug. What would you suggest for coverings for a wing chair? What colors for an additional new chair or two which I must buy? What wall color, window treatment and accessories?

• • • •

ANSWER: You might have the sofa recovered in deep biege with blue-green welting, then have the wing chair in a faded mulberry and the two new chairs in blue-green. The walls could then be biege with glass curtains of beige to match and draperies of a figured chintz or linen that harmonizes with the other colors in the room. I'd like the lamps with mulberry pottery bases and beige shades.

Federal Service Is Called Fine Field for Women

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE IDEA that Government work destroys a woman's initiative and makes her a slave of routine is as motheaten as last year's wool blanket, left out of the bag all summer.

Government jobs offer the average woman as high potentialities, as much chance of advancement and superior pay as almost any other career open to the feminine sex today.

So thinks Mrs. Berniece Heffner, newly appointed secretary of the American Federation of Government Employes, who has gleaned her opinions on opportunities for women in this field by 15 years of experience in United States service.

A slender woman with gray-blue eyes and blonde bobbed hair, Mrs. Heffner sat in Mr. Babcock's office yesterday, expressed some of her ideas on the problems of women employed by Uncle Sam, and explained why men still hold so many more executive positions in civil service than women.

Examples Are Pointed Out.

As a preface she pointed out that women had improved their status a good deal since 1862, when Mrs. Jenny Douglas became the first woman Government employe by landing a job trimming currency in the Treasury Department.

"Today there are numbers of women trimming currency," Mrs. Heffner said, "but there is also a woman Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche; another woman, Mrs. Blair Bannister, is Assistant Treasurer of the United States, and still another, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, is Director of the Mint."

She also mentioned that while "the World War was the real opening wedge for women in government service, women have managed to acquit themselves competently enough to hold their jobs in the face of a world depression. Today, there are about half as many women as men in the Government bureaus in the District, as well as a large number throughout the country."

In this connection she pointed out a smaller percentage of women, in proportion to men, were employed outside the District, "because so much work in the field is manual or in some way particularly suited to men."

Question of Suitability.

Explaining why there are so many more men than women in executive positions in Government service, she continued, "Such jobs involve a certain amount of contention, and the battle ax is still relegated to the man—as much by women as by other men. It isn't a matter of discrimination against women, but simply that men are more suited to certain types of jobs than women, just as women are generally more competent in certain others; stenographic work, for example. But don't get the idea "that I think women are successful only as stenographers. Woman's success in countless lines of Government work proves merit doesn't depend on sex."

Mrs. Heffner's belief that the average woman in Federal employment has a chance to advance, a hope for a future, is based on her own experience. In 1920 she entered Government service, accepting a job that paid $1,200 a year, "less than the average salary of women employes in the District," she said. In the last 15 years, however, she has climbed step by step to a much higher salary level, leaving the Public Health Service in Chicago to enter the Veterans' Administration in Detroit and subsequently becoming assistant accountant there. From Detroit she came to Washington to accept the new position.

Asked whether she was in favor of married women working, she replied, smiling, "I'm a living answer to that. Besides, I think the question is not 'Should they work?' but 'Why shouldn't they?'"

Contrary Child Should Be Led And Not Driven

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"I WON'T!"

It is bad enough to cope with the statement in one's home where there is a certain amount of privacy. It is when one is away from home, perhaps in a crowded shop or at a street crossing that such a response proves, to say the least, baffling.

How to deal with such insubordination is a problem which is variously answered according to the mother's mood or nature. Some pick up the child and make him do what has been asked. Others supinely yield and give the child the victory. A third, militant class, up-end the youngster and spank him on the spot. All, however, feel humiliated at having been placed in such a situation, and of course lay the entire blame on the child.

But, however, contrary and obstinate the child may seem at the moment, basically the blame should be laid on the mother. Either she has not trained the child correctly, or, knowing that he is in a state of negativism, she should never have raised the issue at such a moment.

Most children go through a period when they automatically say "No" to any order. Whether they are making a bid for attention or trying to assert a budding independence makes no difference; the behavior is the same in either case.

Under such circumstances, the mother would do well never to precipitate a crisis in public. Once she has gotten the answer "I won't," she has no weapon left but main force. She may, of course, try indifference. But to feign indifference to a child who refuses, for example, to cross the street, or enter a shop, or take a street car is difficult. Furthermore, once the order has been given it must be carried out, for the sake of future discipline.

Visitor Reports Fear of Revolts Near Ethiopia

Tension Widespread, Says Miss Rudd, Southern Rhodesian Teacher.

TENSENESS over the Italo-Ethiopian dispute is being felt throughout Africa, Miss Joyce G. Rudd, instructor in home economics for the government of Southern Rhodesia, reports. Miss Rudd, who is at the Dodge Hotel, is in this country to study the teaching of home economics in schools and colleges.

Basing her observations on opinions she has heard expressed among members of the British population in Africa, Miss Rudd said the dispute was regarded with grave fears by colonials as the possible cause of a widespread uprising among African natives.

In Southern Rhodesia, founded 50 years ago, and the youngest of the British colonies, the natives outnumber the British more than 20 to 1, according to Miss Rudd. There are a million and a quarter blacks to only 50,000 whites. In many of the outlying villages there are only three Britishers: The commissioner, the school teacher and the store keeper.

Color Uppermost.

"Already the natives in British Somaliland are rushing to the aid of their Ethiopian brothers," Miss Rudd said. Many of them crossed the Abyssinian border recently and enlisted in the army of that country. Without stopping necessarily to reason out the whys and wherefores of the case, they have instinctively adopted the cause of their fellow Africans.

"Of course, while we have good reason to believe the Rhodesians are fundamentally loyal to the English, their intelligence is not of the highest grade, and half of them have no education. In a crisis, it is quite possible that they might not stop to distinguish between a white man who happens to be an Italian and one who is an Englishman. Uppermost in their minds is not nationality, but color.

European Center Created.

"Naturally, in a country as predominantly given over to natives as Southern Rhodesia, the danger of such an uprising is impossible to exaggerate. Where the blacks outnumber the whites to such a degree, revolt would mean something close to outright slaughter. However, so far we have had no cause to think that any such designs are entertained by our natives."

Despite the fact that the number of white people in Southern Rhodesia would just about fill one of Washington's suburbs, they have managed to create a distinctly European center for themselves, according to Miss Rudd. They play golf, go to the movies, drive automobiles, and in short enjoy all the adjuncts of modern civilization, she said.

Miss Rudd is here on a gift fund from the Carnegie Institute. She plans to leave for the West in a few days.

On Vacation

During the absence of Miss Mary Haworth on vacation, her column, "The Business of Living," is temporarily discontinued. It will be resumed the latter part of October.

Candy to Reward Women Submitting Best Candy Recipes

Women who like good candy will be especially interested in The Post's recipe contest this week. The contest itself is devoted to recipes for your favorite candy, and the prizes are in keeping with the theme of the contest. A five-pound box of delicious assorted Martha Washington chocolates and bon bons will be awarded to the woman who submits the best recipe. A three and a two pound box of the same fine candy will be given as second and third prizes.

All you have to do to enter this contest is to write out your favorite candy recipe and submit it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure that it is mailed in time to reach this office by Friday morning at the latest.

Not So Confusing.

A note of unusual uncertainty in the face of great events found its way into Senator Borah's broadcast from Boise on Monday night. Confessing "a feeling of discouragement and moral confusion" because of the Italo-Ethiopian war, the veteran isolationist added his opinion that "the settlement of international controversies through peaceful means is a long way off."

Psychologists will be justified in wondering how much of the Senator's sense of discouragement is due to the actual situation, and how much to the positive, constructive pressure for peace which the League of Nations, in spite of enormous difficulties, is now beginning to exert. As an implacable foe and detractor of the League, Mr. Borah can scarcely be expected to express gratification over its present good showing.

Americans as a whole, having been indifferent rather than hostile to the development of world-peace machinery at Geneva, are probably less confused at the present time than is Mr. Borah. They have welcomed the President's neutrality proclamations not so much from any feeling that these guarantee immunity, but because they so clearly indicate that while the United States will not actively aid, it at least will do nothing to oppose, collective action against an aggressor state.

The position and traditions of the United States properly make this country very cautious in committing itself to any foreign entanglement of unpredictable scope. But the position and traditions of the United States demand even more strongly that we shall never give even tacit assistance to any nation which, by violation of solemn treaties freely engaged upon, becomes an outlaw in the world community. An isolationist obsession is all too likely to forget the second consideration in its over-emphasis on the first.

To many Americans the present crisis is not so much a cause for bewilderment as one which arouses the keenest interest in the outcome of what is so obviously one of the great crises of history.

Soon or late, if our civilization is to continue, the theory of complete freedom of national action will have to be modified in the interests of the world community as a whole. Whether or not we are now at the beginning of that eventual test none can yet say. But, if this be the time, the inevitable travail of evolution, the growing pains of man's unending struggle for a better order, will not be able to overshadow the majesty of the occasion for the generation which sees such a drama played before its eyes.

End The Dole Or Bust.

The pretense that direct relief for the unemployed will be ended by November 1 is gradually crumbling. WPA officials are not yet ready to admit the impossibility of providing useful jobs for 3,500,000 men by that date. But they have decided to continue direct relief payments at least until November 15. Coupled with several "liberalizing" modifications of work-relief plans, this current announcement is unmistakable evidence of a retreat from the optimistic forecasts of a few months ago.

Three weeks remain for the scheduled consummation of an employment program as gigantic as it is haphazard. Less than one-third of the fund set aside for approved projects has actually become available for expenditure. A tremendous job of checking the legality of many approved undertakings remains to be accomplished. Direct relief is to be continued because officials foresee that their attempt to cram thousands of projects through the WPA mill before November 1 can not suddenly change the conditions that have made doles a necessity.

Yet the frantic race to create 3,500,000 jobs within a strictly limited period continues. The WPA has adopted a sort of "end the dole or bust" attitude, without giving much thought to the probability of the latter alternative. Only if the work-relief program offered a constructive and permanent cure for unemployment could this headlong dash to make it effective be heartily indorsed. Actually the program is just an expensive substitute for the dole that will not greatly change the status of jobless men. Why, then, should the WPA throw to the winds all ordinary safeguards against waste and snap judgment in a mad scramble to achieve the impossible?

Attempts to solve unemployment through public works have gone beyond the experimental stage. The majority of such undertakings have proved relatively fruitless in reducing the relief rolls. In these circumstances a fresh assault upon the problem of idleness and destitution by means of secondary public construction will be justified only if it is most carefully planned and scrupulously administered. When a notorious absence of planning is combined with frantic haste in the expenditure of money, the odds in favor of a costly failure are overwhelming.

In spite of the rarefied atmosphere in which the WPA moves, there is no danger of the sky falling when it fails to create 3,500,000 jobs as foolishly promised. Its prospects of permanently lightening the relief burden would be immeasurably improved if the impossible objective now sought were frankly abandoned and attention concentrated upon judicious expenditure of remaining work-relief funds.

Gov. Hoffman's Proposal.

If the constitutional amendment proposed by Gov. Hoffman, of New Jersey, aroused any enthusiasm it is not yet apparent. The Governor's complaint against the enactment of numerous statutes repugnant to the fundamental law touches an issue of great significance. But the solution he offers might lead to greater distortion of democratic government than has anything attempted under the New Deal.

No student of government tries to minimize the problem resulting from the enforcement of unconstitutional statutes during the interval between their enactment and a Supreme Court decision. The rise and fall of the NRA is all that is needed to indicate the chaos which may result. It does not follow, however, that such confusion and waste of effort could be eliminated by compelling the Supreme Court to act as a direct censor of every congressional act.

Gov. Hoffman suggests that no law become effective until its constitutionality has been attested by the Supreme Court. His amendment would require that body to pass judgment upon hundreds of statutes every year—an obviously impossible task. The court would be forced to render superficial decisions based upon pure theory instead of concrete facts. Abstract opinions on intricate legal questions are always difficult. In these circumstances they might become intolerable. For conversion of the court into a board of review for new laws would be a step toward dictatorship of another sort—dictatorship by the judiciary.

At present the Supreme Court does not directly pass judgment upon acts of Congress. In adjudicating legal disputes, however, it may decide that a statute is incompatible with the fundamental law. This means, of course, that the statute can not be enforced. Although the effect of such decisions is to nullify the statutes in question, this is a very different function from passing blanket judgment upon acts of Congress before any specific case is carried to the courts. In the one case, the court serves as a supreme judicial body; in the other, it would become an unrepresentative legislative chamber.

Obviously, then, the proposed Hoffman amendment would bring about a major change in our system of government. It would throw upon the Supreme Court an unnatural burden leading to the disintegration of that essential agency of constitutional democracy. Instead of thus trying to expand the powers of the court, the emphasis should be placed upon the responsibility of Congress and the President to remain within the limits of the Constitution, which can always be expanded by amendment.

The function which Gov. Hoffman would impose upon the court should really be performed by the Attorney General and the congressional committees to which proposed legislation is referred for study. In this way the question of constitutionality would be considered before and not after the passage of laws. Of course, this procedure would not end the invalidation of some border-line acts by the courts. But it would prevent orgies of irresponsible lawmaking encouraging a flood of adverse decisions.

When the court is courageously performing its duty, while the legislative and executive branches resort to ill-judged short-cuts, it is clearly out of place to suggest that the fault rests with the judicial arm of our Government.

The Horrors Of Sykesville.

That Sykesville, Md., owes its name to the Bill Sykes of "Oliver Twist" is improbable. But the brutality and heartlessness discovered at the State hospital for the insane there located argues for the connection. A report, submitted to Gov. Nice by his survey commission, reveals that the institution has been converted from the asylum it should be into a veritable madhouse. Graft, cruelty and neglect are said to have been the regular order of the day at Sykesville.

It was 25 years ago that Clifford Beers emerged from the cells and straitjackets of a then typical hospital for the insane to write his book, "The Mind That Found Itself." In it he recounted his experiences and thereby started an almost universal campaign to improve the miserable lot of persons mentally ill. The results can be seen on every hand, St. Elizabeth's here in Washington being one notable example of enlightened care for most unfortunate of human beings. But apparently there yet remains much work to be done.

The State commissioner of mental hygiene, in acknowledging receipt of the commission's report, submits that every effort has been made to give patients the best care possible. He points to the "limits imposed the the State's financial condition, which provides only 7 cents a meal, 14 cents a day for nursing care and 57 cents a day per patient for the entire operation of the hospital." These are scandalously low figures, giving additional point to the Governor's sensible promise to look "for the correction of abuses more than the censuring of individuals."

Labor In Convention.

Delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, now meeting in Atlantic City, report themselves as representing a dues-paying membership of well over 3,000,000. Except for a brief period following the war, the A. F. of L. has never before enjoyed such popularity.

The increase may be fairly interpreted as a sign of gathering recovery, for the unemployed do not pay union dues. In part, also, it comes from the effective work of trade-union organizers over a wide front, and to the lessening hostility of far-sighted employers to trade unionism as such. Perhaps the greatest factor in advancing the position of organized labor in recent months, however, has been the New Deal. Both in precept and practice the Administration has espoused the attitude that trade unionism should be regarded as an essential part of modern social and economic organization.

In the light of its increase, both in membership and strength, it is essential that the A. F. of L. recall that growth always entails heavier responsibilities. As the state has come to consider the welfare of labor one of its principal concerns, so now labor must recognize its increased obligations to the welfare of the state. That reflection should underlie consideration of all the issues on the agenda of the present convention.

Among the issues facing the Federation the most important is that of the structure of its internal organization. Will it be the traditional craft unionism that prevails, or industrial unionism with its promise of greater power through centralization of authority? That question, which has long plagued the Federation, came sharply to the fore yesterday with the introduction of no less than 11 resolutions demanding that craft unionism be kept out of the mass production industries.

Since 1897, when the Western Federation of Miners split away, the A. F. of L. has slowly been forced to make more and more concessions in the direction of industrial, or vertical, unionism. Notwithstanding the resentment of the exclusive craft unions, which see their carefully bulwarked prerogatives jeopardized by the trend, the fact is that of the 106 unions in the Federation in 1933, less than 25 were pure craft unions. Further, at last year's convention, John L. Lewis engineered through a resolution calling for vertical organization of several mass-production industries but qualified by the clause, "as in the judgment of the executive council may be necessary."

The fight for the industrial form of organization is being even more strongly pressed this year. There is no doubt that this pattern is a natural counterpart of the corporate character of modern industry, and that it can promise a better discipline, a stronger consolidation of power and a more inclusive membership than the old craft unionism. The trend would receive wider popular support, however, if it were emphasized that the industrial union is less subject to racketeering, and more susceptible of control in the public interest, than the more traditional form of American labor organization.

A Warning To Education.

Between the lines of the letter President Conant has sent to the Harvard faculty, advising each to take the oath of allegiance now required by Massachusetts law, there is a lesson to be studied by all concerned with education. By his statement that he felt at the time the bill was passed, and still feels, the measure to be "an unnecessary and unwise piece of legislation," President Conant implies what is too seldom appreciated: that academic freedom, like any other sort of freedom, is to be gained and held only by dint of continual struggle.

The time to have rallied opposition to this foolish and potentially dangerous law was before it was enacted. A law, for all its error, may not be righted by openly flouting it, least of all by an institution as vitally concerned with the development of good citizenship as is the school. This is all the more true in the case of a university of the standing and influence of Harvard. President Conant is stern in his requirement that no Harvard professor shall break the law. But this does not prevent his letter from serving as a rallying point for all who see the great desirability of its prompt repeal.

The letter has a further use. Educators in those States which have not yet succumbed to excited demands for like legislation may read it with profit. For it warns of the dangers inherent in every assault on education's integrity, and of the difficulties of repairing those losses afterward.

Sad days, these. Niagara Falls is crumbling, the Rock of Gibraltar is disintegrating and Americans are beginning to lose faith in the Government's Santa Claus.

"What is your favorite day of the week?" asks a psychologist. Tomorrow.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Writing in the Saturday Evening Post, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt wisely remarks that "at a child's birth, if a mother could ask a fairy godmother to endow it with the most useful gift, that gift should be curiosity." It is curiosity that leads children, and grown-ups, too, into paths of knowledge, into new thoughts, new methods, new achievements.

But the gift of curiosity is not an unmixed blessing. It requires control and direction. The laudable curiosity of a child in taking a clock apart to see what makes it tick is not precisely analogous to the curiosity which impels an adult in high place to tear asunder the machinery of traditionally successful government, without the slightest interest in putting it together again. Curiosity as to what will happen inspires most experiments, but where the intricacies of political economy are concerned there should be a limit.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

From A Real American.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A radio announcer Sunday took it upon himself to broadcast a poll for Washington on the Italo-Ethiopian situation. He said that the entire Italian sentiment of the city supports Mussolini's conquest and that a call for supporters of Ethiopia returned only two volunteers among colored people.

To say nothing of the wisdom, propriety, or even good taste on the part of this greatest educative force of our country which actually is making material sacrifices, proving the sincerity of its neutrality at the present terrible moment, such an attempt to start something by radio, pretending that it already exists, seems both unfair and disingenuous.

The writer can perhaps speak for the colored community of Washington with as much assurance as this unseen and unknown "announcer of predilections" and without fear of contradiction she asserts that they refuse to make a race issue of the unspeakable and outrageous onslaught of a big bullying despotism, wearing the garb of Christian civilization, grabbing the land and devastating the homes of a peaceable God-fearing people with a standard of Christianity unsurpassed among the self-styled Christian nations of Europe. That their homes are on the continent of Africa is nothing for persons of African descent in America to grow excited about.

Any way you look at it, colored Americans are Americans. This is their native land, they know no other, owe allegiance to none besides. If length of service counts for anything the first consignment of their African strain reached these shores just one year ahead of the good brig Mayflower, having been variously crossed since by the aborigines as well as by later claimants for pioneer honors.

There is no disposition to thank a Mr. Nobody for giving them a rating on any national question other than the standard of all lovers of justice and fair play among nations or individuals, and they have only the earnest desire for peace and good will on earth and decent behavior among men.

How Long?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a word to add to the good articles that have been published in your paper about the pedestrian question.

The mess in the streets at crossings is simply unspeakable from the pedestrian's standpoint, and often, when I am making unsuccessful efforts to cross at intersections, I think of the well-known lines: "Cannon to right of them, cannon to left of them," but instead of cannon, it is honking, shrieking, whirling machines of death trying to run us down. The auto drivers should bear in mind that the streets originally belonged to the pedestrians, but it seems the machine age has put an end to this.

The question arises, "Where do the pedestrians come in?" The answer is simple. They simply don't come in at all. They have nothing to say and no way to cross streets any more. The automobilists have seen to that and have it all their own way. How long is this going to last? Until the last unfortunate pedestrian has been run down and killed? M. R. REID.

Turnover At The FHA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note the comments of Morgan Baker in the Federal Diary and your subsequent editorial pointing out what you term is an "unusual personnel turnover." In the case of the Federal Housing Administration this is chiefly a "book turnover."

It is a rule of the Civil Service Commission that, although a man has received his training in the Washington headquarters of a Governmental organization, like the Federal Housing Administration, and is transferred to the field the employe or official in question be removed from the rolls and then reappointed to the other post in the field for which he has been trained. This has been true of an overwhelming majority of those, in the books, who have been written down as dismissed and then reemployed. The actual turnover as far as the Federal Housing Administration is concerned has been negligible.

As to the estimated administrative cost of the Federal Housing Administration, put at something more than $8,500,000, it might be pointed out that any business organization which develops a volume of business of more than $350,241,000 has been well within the bounds of good business. This is particularly true of an organization which started from scratch and has just ended its first year; and, too, most of this business has been done this year. GEORGE W. NEVILLE,
Special Assistant to the Administrator, Federal Housing Administration.

Underground Escalators?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that there is entirely too much talk of proposed pedestrian control. I am both a motorist and a pedestrian, also a street car rider. I admit that the pedestrians are not as well trained to observe signal lights as in other communities. However, since we do not have either a pedestrian light or corner police one can hardly blame the pedestrian for getting out to the middle of the street whenever he sees a chance and then depending upon another lull to permit him to negotiate the second half. It is their only protection against the right-turn speed hogs. At many corners, such as the southwest corner of Fifteenth and New York avenue, the pedestrian has no show on the green light on account of the right-turners and obviously has not the right of way on the red light, so when has he any chance? Underground moving stairways are the solution here and at several similar points. SUBSCRIBER.

For Careful Driving.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because of the widespread interest which has grown into a Nation-wide movement to reduce automobile accidents, I feel sure that you will be interested in a letter which I have just received from our president, G. F. Swift, giving all employes instructions to exercise the greatest vigilance in the operation of not only company cars and trucks but their own personal motor vehicles.

Needless to say, the members of our organization here in Washington are going to give Mr. Swift every cooperation in his safe and sane motorcar driving campaign. It is our hope that our own efforts will aid to a considerable degree the general movement for safety.

The Incident Of The Falaba.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's emphatic warning to the effect that he desires it "to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk" recalls vividly the incident of the British passenger steamer Falaba.

On March 28, 1915, this passenger steamer was sunk by a German submarine and an American citizen, Leo C. Thrasher, was drowned. The loss of a single American life resulted in a sharp protest in a note dated May 13, 1915, prepared by President Wilson and forwarded by Secretary of State Bryan.

Again, on June 9 of that year, President Wilson stated: "With regard to the sinking of the steamer Falaba, by which an American citizen lost his life, the Government of the United States is surprised to find the imperial German government contending that an effort on the part of a merchantman to escape capture and secure assistance alters the obligation of the officer seeking to make the capture, in respect of the safety of the lives of those on board the merchantman, although the vessel had ceased her attempt to escape when torpedoed."

Thus, those who seek to criticize President Roosevelt's epochal proclamation lose sight of the fact that the loss of a single American life on a vessel of a belligerent power might very well prove to be one of the steps leading to war.

The effective work of the League of Nations at Geneva also recalls President Wilson's address of May 27, 1916, in which he said:

. . . . I am sure I speak the mind and wish of the people of America when I say that the United States is willing to become a partner in any feasible association of nations . . . I feel that the world is even now upon the eve of a great consummation, when some common force will be brought into existence which shall safeguard right as the first and most fundamental interest of all peoples and all governments, when coercion shall be summoned not to the service of a political ambition or selfish hostility but to the service of a common order, a common justice and a common peace.

This hope is now being realized at Geneva, where the League of Nations is demonstrating that it is a vital, effective force for peace.

Certainly we have now before us a striking example of constructive co-operation for world peace. As President Wilson so aptly stated to Congress on April 2, 1917, "a steadfast concert for peace can never be maintained except by a partnership of democratic nations. No autocratic government could be trusted to keep faith within it or observe its covenants. It must be a league of honor, a partnership of opinion."

Perhaps from these dark days there will evolve the dawn of that ideal of the ages—Peace on Earth.

The Post Impressionist

Are Women All Alike?

Post Office, Wednesday.

THERE is not much variety in controversy—because, at most, it permits of only two weapons. So it is pleasant to have both weapons in use.

That is why we welcome a letter from Madeleine F. Stanton.

Until yesterday, every one of the Column's readers who rushed into our American Woman War wielded some sort of bludgeon. It mattered not whether these volatile volunteers came to defend the lovely image of the A. W. against the cold analysis of Dr. Boris Sokoloff of New York, the angry attacks of Dr. Harrison L. Aspenwall of Boston, or whether the combatants rallied to the support of these scientific gentlemen.

Even our No. 1 Feminist, Mrs. Lelia Kestler, admitted that her first impulse was to knock the savants "over the head with a rolling-pin—and then run." And even Mrs. Kestler, having mightily administered the blow which tempted her, remained to administer a lot more such blows.

Consider also the entire column of excerpts from letters in both armies published even before Mrs. Kestler launched her big offensive. They were all excerpts from letters hammered out by bludgeons.

Now, at last and however, appears Miss (or is it Mrs.?) Stanton—with a rapier.

"My first impulse," says Miss Stanton——

We shall call her "Miss." That title is formidable without being formal. The Post-Impressionist never could agree with the sentiment borrowed from George Moore by Richard Le Gallienne, who himself bears so odd a name; the sentiment that the loveliest name is made more lovely when preceded by a "Mrs.," less lovely when heralded by a mere "Miss." One of our few exceptions is made in cases like the Kestler case.

So: "My first impulse toward Drs. Aspenwall and Sokoloff," writes Miss Stanton—whose letter bears an authentic Washington date line—"was to shake them both by the hand—and hear what more they may have to say on the subject of American Womanhood."

* * *

Even thus did Charles de Baatz-Castlemore, Seigneur d'Artagnan, raise his Seventeenth Century sword in salute before running that blade through the body of a Richelieu hireling. Even so, only about a fortnight since, did Joseph Louis Barrow extend an open glove to touch the glove of Maximilian Baer. Always and everywhere, courtesy counts.

For courtesy does not imply fear. Witness what follows.

With a further graceful gesture, Miss Stanton continues:

"A confirmed and scary bachelor once handed me a copy of H. L. Mencken's 'In Defense of Women,' cautioning me to withhold it from the eyes of the male members of my family—at least, if I valued my mental tranquillity. Later this bachelor was terribly chagrined when I informed him that Mencken was right, but had not told the half of it.

"The giver of the book had pected me to be up in arms in denial."

Now, however, she is up in arms. The amenities of the field of honor are over, the politeness of the field of honor is replaced by the grimmer realities of the code.

"En garde!"

"It is," declares Miss Stanton, "a mug's game being a woman—unless one is blessed with a well developed sense of humor. But in the latter case, who can deny that we have the best of it? And that is as it should be.

"Men are adorably naive—especially when they attempt to discuss women.

"That goes for Mr. Mencken, also. And, you will admit, he knows a thing or two."

We do admit it. We admit everything that Miss Stanton says—until she comes to her concluding contention.

* * *

Dr. Sokoloff, you will remember, argued that the woman of his pre-revolutionary Russia was—that her descendant-in-exile is—a more self-sacrificing lover than—well, than the average American woman has yet become. You will remember that the audacious Dr. Aspenwall, going further, cited the women of lots of other nations as "better wives and mothers" than the women of the United States.

"I have," says Miss Stanton, "lived abroad for eight years." During that time she, too, studied "our foreign sisters." Well, says she:

"Let me assure you that women are the same the world over, despite surface differences."

Yes, we hasten to let Miss Stanton deliver that assurance.

But the Post-Impressionist, who believes every woman perfect, has never found any two women alike, in any land, at any time.

Monsieur de Paris

By Andre Vulliet

Head Clipper Of France.

Paris.

YOU may have your own ideas about the profession of head clipper, but you would probably find they are all wrong if you knew Henri Deibler, the French official executioner, the man who has cut off more than 300 heads and has managed to retain a tender heart, a weak throat and perfect bourgeois manners.

He is not exactly what we might call a prominent Paris figure, as he never goes anywhere. Yet, he is unique. Unique in France since he has no competitors, being the only regulary appointed public executioner for the whole country. And, maybe, unique in the world, as we doubt if there can be another man in the same profession looking so much like a retired dignified civil servant.

As a matter of fact, he looks exactly like the typical Frenchman you would like to meet for a chat and an insight on the average French bourgeois mentality. Gray-bearded, 66 years old, rather short in his dark suits, Monsieur de Paris (as the men in his profession have been called traditionally for centuries) takes a brisk walk every morning and a ride in his low-priced car, driven by his daughter, every evening. He likes to keep fit. The rest of the time he is devoted to his flowers in the sunny garden of his villa at St. Cloud, a lovely place near Paris, something like Chevy Chase—the rest of the time he is not busy professionally, which, year in and year out, does not occur more than a dozen times annually.

• • • •

MONSIEUR DE PARIS is rarely seen with new people. First, because he likes his home, where he lives with his sister, his daughter, his son-in-law and his three nephews who always assist him when there is "work." He is a family man, don't you see. He waited until he was appointed a public executioner before he got married because he would not enter matrimony without a stable position. But Monsieur de Paris also knows that, should he like to meet you, the minute he gave you his card it would send a chill down your spine. For his name is familiar to nearly everyone in Paris or in France, and everyone knows that, when he gives you the shivers, it's for good. He has been at it now for nearly 37 years and that is enough to establish a reputation.

The profession of clipping heads is not one which you can try just because you happen to like it. It's a family affair. From 1688 to 1847 all the "Monsieur de Paris" were Sansons, fathers and sons. In 1847, one certain Heindrech broke in, followed by a man named Roche, who was succeeded in turn, in 1879, by Anatole Deibler, the granduncle of the present one. Considering that it is already determined that Henri Deibler will pass on the job to his son-in-law or to one of his nephews, there is little doubt that the family tradition will be preserved.

• • • •

IT IS not a bad job either. Monsieur de Paris is paid by piecework. Seven thousand five hundred francs, or $500, per head, plus the traveling expenses. He travels incognito, of course, but he travels.

Suppose there was but one executioner in the United States and but one electric chair belonging to him. He would have to rush from one place to another, carrying his chair like an electric iron, plugging it in, doing his work and coming back. So is M. Deibler. The guillotine is his. He keeps it in his garage, next to his car. Rather, he has two of them. A heavy one and a light one for travel, the "widow" and the "daughter," as they are called. Naturally, he keeps them dismantled, ready for transportation. But they can be quickly assembled and it does not take more than a couple of hours, in the courtyard of any prison, to set them up for the crack of dawn, with the 110-pound knife ready for its fast, accurate 13-foot fall.

In the ancient regime, the profession of public executioner was an envied one, with a fat salary of some $8,000 to $10,000. To be sure, he had to be dressed up, curled, powdered, with white silk stockings and evening shoes. Today, under a more democratic regime, there are no such obligations. The public executioner dons no uniform. If M. Deibler always wears a top hat when he is on duty, it is because he knows when to put in a touch of old French politeness.

Rock of Ages

By William Lyon Phelps

THE eighteenth century in England was the golden age of hymn-writing. Many of the most familiar and many of the finest hymns in all the church hymn books were written in that period, when Isaac Watts, Charles Wesley and others were active.

The hymn, "Rock of Ages," still one of the best known and most frequently sung today was written by the Rev. Augustus Montague Toplady, who was born in 1740 and died in 1778, before he had reached the age of 40. He was educated at Westminster School and at Trinity College, Dublin; was a settled pastor; and engaged in violent religious controversies with the Methodists. These controversies, which seemed so important to him, are forgotten; his theological treatises are forgotten; but in the year 1775 he happened to print in a periodical called the Gospel Magazine his original hymn—"Rock of Ages."

• • • •

There are many variant readings in different hymn books, but here is the hymn as he wrote it.

Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee!
Let the water and the blood
From Thy riven side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Cleanse me from its guilt and power.

Not the labors of my hands
Can fulfil Thy law's demands;
Could my zeal no respite know,
Could my tears forever flow,
All for sin could not atone;
Thou must save, and Thou alone.

Nothing in my hand I bring;
Simply to Thy cross I cling;
Naked, come to Thee for dress;
Helpless, look to Thee for grace;
Foul, I to the fountain fly;
Wash me, Savior, or I die!

While I draw this fleeting breath,
When my eyestrings break in death,
When I soar through tracts unknown,
See Thee on Thy judgment throne;
Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee!

• • • •

The word "eye-strings" is too realistic for modern hymn books; and I have never seen it in any of them. The eyestrings were supposed to be tendons or nerves or muscles of the eye, and people at that time thought they broke in the moment of death.

Although the author meant his hymn to express Calvinistic as opposed to Methodist theology, it is now sung in all Methodist churches; for he wrote a masterpiece of religious aspiration.

The Bombing Of Aduwa

Attack On Ethiopian Town Without Previous Declaration Of War Sets Precedent Which Only League Success Can Prevent From Endangering Future World Peace.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

IN this year, 1935, when we can look back upon a century of the most rapid progress the world has ever known, we have just witnessed an act of almost unparalleled barbarity. The air forces of Mussolini, with no prior declaration of war or other warning to the Ethiopian populace, have bombed the open town of Aduwa, killing and maiming harmless and unprepared civilians, men, women and children. They have committed this act while a state of peace existed legally between Italy and Ethiopia, and while the Italian Minister, protected by his diplomatic status, was still performing his official duties in Addis Ababa.

Other civilized nations have been guilty of barbarous acts on occasions still vivid in our memory. During the World War, the armed forces of Germany inaugurated three wartime practices which electrified the world with horror. Poison gas was first utilized, bringing suffering and death in a new and dreadful form. London was bombed from the air with the purpose of destroying morale by terrifying the civilian population. Passenger liners and merchant ships were sunk without warning by the German U-boats.

These acts, however, despite the horrors they entailed, were not committed in time of peace. They were, on the contrary, only carried out by a nation which felt its very existence to be at stake, many months after formal declaration of war.

• • • •

THE Italian bombing of Aduwa must be regarded differently. A surprise attack on an unaggressive population during a legal state of peace, it constituted at once a patent violation of the League of Nations Covenant and the Kellogg Pact and a complete disregard of the accepted provisions of international law governing the conduct of hostilities by civilized states. Its present illegality, however, may prove far less serious than its future implications, since it creates a precedent bringing a new menace into international relations.

New military practices inaugurated in one war tend to become the normal procedure in the next. All students of the subject today agree that the German innovations of the World War will be generally followed if another large-scale war should occur.

The troops of all powers are now trained in gas warfare, both attack and defense. While the European nations are expanding rapidly the size of their aerial armadas, the wholesale destruction of civilian life and property in the capitals and industrial centers of every potential enemy has been carefully planned in advance by each of their general staffs. And European powers do not maintain fleets of submarines to operate against enemy warships alone, an operation which the World War has shown to be of questionable value and of the greatest danger to the submarine itself.

• • • •

THE new Italian military practice, a surprise air raid on a foreign town during a state of peace, creates a similar precedent for the future. A moment's consideration will show that the military value of such a surprise attack would be infinitely greater as a means of announcing war between two industrialized nations.

How could there be any security in Europe if it were generally feared that this Italian precedent would be followed in the future by other military powers? In such circumstances, the ambitions, or perhaps even the requirements for continuance in office, of any European dictator would be sufficient in themselves to keep his neighbors in a permanent state of fear and defensive preparation.

Fortunately for ourselves, American cities are protected by great oceans from any such surprise attack by air. Until the time has arrived when the airplane can cross and re-cross these oceans, Americans will be relatively immune from this new danger and from the widespread nervousness it will cause. But how about the Panama Canal?

If a foreign naval power meditated war upon us, and the bulk of our battle fleet were on the other side of the canal, the new Italian system of opening hostilities would serve it admirably. A small number of bombing planes, operating from specially squipped merchant ships stationed near the canal in a surprise peace-time raid, might overnight place the power which thus announced itself hostile in supreme command of one of our oceans for a period of many months.

• • • •

TO the average American such a situation appears incredible. But so does the Italian peace-time bombings which opened the advance into Ethiopia. Those of us who have been to Italy have been attracted to the Italian people by their gayety and warm-heartedness, and have held in deep respect the many contributions they have made to the advancement of civilization. We cannot but regret that so barbarous an act should have been committeed in the name of Italy. We find it, in particular, difficult to understand how Italian "prestige" can be enhanced by such means, when the announced aim of Mussolini is to "civilize" Ethiopia.

Caruso, Marconi or even the liner Rexe add, in their different ways, to the prestige of Italy abroad. The bombing of an open town during a state of peace bitterly detracts from the honor they have brought their country, and reminds reasonable people in other lands of certain unfavorable characteristics of the Italian Middle Ages. What Italy has done at Aduwa in 1935 has wrought far greater damage to Italian prestige abroad than what Ethiopia did to Italy in that same town in 1896.

Whatever the foreign reaction to it, the precedent of this peacetime air raid remains. It forms one more issue in the decisive struggle between Mussolini and the League of Nations, which has become a battle between militarism and law in world affairs. If Mussolini "gets away with" the violation of the Covenant and the Kellogg Pact and achieves his aims in Ethiopia, the precedent of opening an aggressive war with an unannounced aerial attack will have become an established practice in inetrnational life.

THE strategic value of this practice will make it an important first step in any new military aggression, and in a world where collective security has been set at nought by one dictator, we may expect to see other powers avail themselves avidly of the Italian precedent. The relative strength of the American Navy and air force will then become a much more vital national consideration than it is today.

If, on the other hand, the members of the League of Nations stand firm, and their collective efforts, whether financial and economic or military, lead to the failure of Mussolini's conquest, surprise peacetime air raids will be discredited as an instrument of national policy together with unprovoked wars of aggression.

The vital decision now shaping up will change our world for better or for worse, perhaps before the end of 1935.

Associated Eliminates 278 of Its Subsidiaries

New York, Oct. 8.—During June, 1935, three more companies were eleminated from the rapidly shrinking total of companies comprising the Associated System eliminations since 1923 are 278.

Associated Utilities Investing Corporation and Power and Light Investments Inc., both holding companies, were merged into another System company. The Philippine Natural Resources Development Corporation, which had been inactive for some time was dissolved.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Mark Twain, Safe And Sane.

INCH by inch, with a rather appalling degree of erudition, Edward Wagenknecht has gone over the whole vast corpus of Mark Twain material—there are no doubt more books and studies on Mark Twain than on any other literary American—and compressed it all into the sensible, balanced pages of "Mark Twain: the Man and His Work" (Yale U. Press, $3). No other book on our most beloved author, not even Paine's biography, covers so much ground. Here we have Mark himself, his wife and daughters and friends and critics upon him, the scholars upon the critics, and Mr. Wagenknecht upon the scholars—in a manner reminiscent of nothing so much as Swift's fleas who "have smaller still to bite 'em, and so proceed ad infinitum."

But there are not going to be many bites taken out of Mr. Wagenknecht, simply because he hews so closely to the golden mean in his interpretation of Mark. He has gleaned so much from his research, he has so rounded out the picture of the boy from Hannibal and the sage of Stormfield, that he can well accuse any later antagonist against his views of that cardinal fault among biographical students—choosing certain data to support a thesis and suppressing other data to defend it.

There is in this roundedness a certain fatalism, not unlike Mark's own. Seeing just about as much of Mark as a person can in this centtenary year, a quarter-century after Mark's death, and understanding him with great sympathy, this study affirms the old axiom—to understand all is to forgive all. Mr. Wagenknecht has left scant room for any more special slants, any more special pleading.

• • • •

THIS central and little vulnerable position can best be seen in the author's decisions from the bench handed down to the warring critics. The sparring has been lively ever since Van Wyck Brooks, in 1920, declared in the pages of "The Ordeal of Mark Twain" that Mark was a born artist, frustrated and warped by Puritanism, capitalism, and his wife. Mr. Brooks made use of the varjous cults of psycho-analysis, so populan in that day, and when Bernard De Voto, in "Mark Twain's America" (1932) brought out the heavy artillery of his knowledge of the frontier and of Pareto, the slaughter was something joyous to see. Now comes Mr. Wagenknecht to slap each of these faction leaders and their followers on the wrist, to pat each on the head a little, and to say that the truth about Mark lies eternally betwixt and between. What are you going to do with a man like that?

For example, after the battling over the grave of poor, dear Livy, Mark's wife, our author says this: "There was too much virility in him for him to be pushed very far from his native bent . . . What he would have been like if he had married another woman, we shall never know. But it would have been very unreasonable to expect any woman—at least any eastern American woman—of this time to do more for him than Oliva Langdon did. Very few could have done so much."

If Mr. Brooks knows nothing of the frontier, Mr. De Voto "is romantic in his whole conception of the frontier." Lewis Mumford accuses Mark of selling himself heart and soul to material progress (true enough, in 1889 Mark wrote an agonizingly barbarous letter to Walt Whitman, congratulating the latter on no other plane, but that of living in the great age of "the amazing, infinitely varied products of coal tar;" Mark went ecstatic over machines; he was the first distinguished author to use a typewriter; oddly enough, he was the very first man on earth to put a telephone in his home). And our author has an answer in a 1905 letter of Mark's which assails material acquisition and money-lust as bitterly as English can phrase it. Mr. Brooks says Mark spoke out against little, if any, of the corruption around him; Mr. De Voto says there was scarcely an evil aspect of the Gilded Age which Mark did not satirize; and Mr. Wagenknecht says that Mark saw many of the rank, noisome branches but not one of the real roots.

So, and on many another topic, the issue is decided in the middle.

THE result would tend to be a rather colorless, safely flabby study if it were not for two things. One is the immense wealth of quotation and ancedote about Mark; the author keeps him, in everything from his wonderful cussing to his $1.50 shaves, square in the center of the stage, and the array of data makes prime reading by itself.

The other lies in Mr. Wagenknecht's own obiter dicta on Mark as a prophet and a reformer. He calls him the first of the "muck-rakers," the first of the "debunkers." He avers, and there is evidence, that Mark foresaw the World War and the Russian Revolution, that he hated war and race prejudice with a vigor little known in his time, that he penetrated the evils of imperialistic capitalism with the very venom of a communist. Mr. Wagenknecht preaches a good bit on these themes, and he has Mark preach them, too, in the final chapter called "Testament."

But is there not something over-solemn, even myopic, here? For in all this last chapter the word "laughter" is conspicuous by its entire absence. On his bluest, most despairing day, Mark Twain would have been gladdened by the fact that his real testament was the richest, heartiest, and best laughter we have had in America.

"Well, I see the Italians took Cavarretta and are marching on Augie Galan."

"I think it will be a short war. Mussolini's Cubs have the smoother machine, according to the papers. The big question is whether it can be kept to a small war or whether the George Moriarity incident will bring on a world conflict."

"What was the Moriarty incident?"

"He's that fellow who shouted 'Viva Ethiopia!' from a British dugout last week."

"Do you think America can keep out of it?"

"I don't know, but President Roosevelt certainly did a wise thing in recalling all our merchant ships from foreign reefs."

"The League of Nations seems to be in a tough spot. I see where Sir Eden Jurges and Goose Laval have had another conference."

"Well, we will just have to hope for the best. What did you think of the world series?"

"I knew the Cardinals would win it all along. That was a hot fight Jimmy Donahue had with those Chicago players, wasn't it?"

"Yeah. Both sides used pretty bad language, but I guess Djibutis went too far in calling an umpire such names, especially without sanctions."

"Didn't he have sanctions?"

"No."

Intelligence Service Urged To Shape Economic Policies

New York, Oct. 8.—Functioning as an intelligence service divorced from the spoils system, university scientists should aid in shaping economic policy, public and private, Prof. Roswell C. McCrea, dean of the School of Business of Columbia University, declared in his annual report to President Nicholas Murray Butler, made public yesterday.

As "partial guardians against ineptitude and inertia" in the public service, this group must contrive a system of co-operation with public administrators before business policy can be intelligently developed and before sound adjustments of spheres of action between business and the Government can be reached, Dean McCrea holds.

"These adjustments will shift from time to time with minor reactions probably in the direction of stronger public controls, with larger provision under public authority of devices and information services facilitating the effective operation of the business system," Dean McCrea says. But whatever the resulting allocation of areas of action and distribution of powers of control, the results of action will turn on the degree to which that action is informed and is carried through by competent and honest personnel.

"An efficient intelligence service is essential to the successful operation of an industrial economy operating under mixed and partial controls; and that service must be largely a public function. Its development, under the guidance of trained technicians, free from the tradition of the spoils system, must come before we can have intelligent elaboration of business policy, either public or private.

"Large responsibility here lies with university scientists, social scientists, economic statisticians, and accountants should be the liaison officers with public administrators; they should advise, criticize, suggest, develop concepts basic to new steps, and furnish guides to interpretation. They should be partial guardians against ineptitude and inertia in public service, regularly testing, stimulating and helping to preserve high standards of integrity and efficiency.

"Informed action can be wise action, but until information becomes adequate and vital, and until public administration divorces itself more largely from the spoils system and passes more fully into the hands of technically competent administrators, we must continue to guess and fumble in the framing of objectives and stumble in their pursuit.

"The problems involved in dealing with this limited aspect of the current business and political alignment are of a sort with which educators and scientists can cope. They have already served richly informing apprenticeships during recent years, and their acquaintance with business and governmental interrelationships has grown apace."

Canada's Recovery Exceeds Rise Here

Montreal, Oct. 8.—Dr. Donald M. Marvin, economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, says in the bank's October letter:

"Explain the greater resilience if you will, by the statement that Canada is a young and vigorous country coming into rugged stature, but nevertheless almost all comparable indices show that Canada has made more progress toward recovery than has the United States.

"According to the index of physical volume of production, total production in Canada in the first six months of 1935 was slightly above parity with the level of the first six months of 1926, while the United States has attained only 80 per cent of such parity.

"Canadian exports in the first half of 1926 were 26 per cent as large as those of the United States and they were 29 per cent as large as those of the United States in the first half of 1935. In both countries there has been a heavy decline in volume and value of exports and imports, but the decline has been heavier in the United States."

Lumber Activity Recedes From Peak

Lumber production during the week ended September 28, 1935, was only about 3 per cent lower than in the preceding 1935 peak week; new business at the mills and shipments were approximately 7 per cent below the high records of the week before.

Shipments, however, were 9 per cent below output and new business was 10 per cent below production. Production and orders were reported considerably in excess of corresponding week of 1934; reported shipments were 16 per cent greater than a year ago. The foregoing comparisons are based upon reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of leading hardwood and softwood mills.

50 N. Y. Stocks Gain 18.7 Per Cent in Year

New York, Oct. 8.—The market value of 50 representative stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange at the close of business for the week ended October 5, was $14,823,913,875, a decrease of $185,515,175, or 1.24 per cent, as compared with the market value of $15,009,429,050 at the close of the preceding week, according to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago, the same fifty stocks had a market value of $11,644,814,000, indicating an increase during the year of $2,179,099,875, or 18.71 per cent.

Company Formed To Harden Copper

Baltimore, Oct. 8 (AP).—A new corporation to buy patents for hardening copper and to manufacture hardened copper products was chartered today by the State tax commission.

The company was formed by Charles E. Moyer, of Long, Md.; Bernard Vinson McGreevy and James Frederick Walter, of Cumberland. Its capital is $40,000, divided into 400 shares with a par value of $100 each. One hundred shares are to be issued to Moyer for American and Canadian patents covering his copper-hardening process.

Breathing Lull Marked by Rise In Trade Tides

Clearings, Power and U. S. Steel Corp. Plans Are Favorable Indices.

By the Associated Press.

At the end of the first month of President Roosevelt's "breathing spell," a check-up showed today that the thirty days were marked by a number of encouraging reports from business.

But a final determination of industrial progress during the month awaits the issuance of governmental and other statistics not yet available.

Europe's troubles tended to restrain the ardor of stock market bulls, interrupting the boom in security prices which followed the announcement of a "breathing spell" for industry, but other indices continued on the whole to rise.

What effect, if any, the President's pronouncement had on these indices is a question on which there are varying views.

Though there were some exceptions, the end of the first month today showed most barometers of industrial activity at or near the peak for the year.

One discouraging feature, however, was that though expenditures for direct relief dropped during the month there were no figures showing a marked decline in the number of unemployed. Government statistics on employment for the period are still to be tabulated.

Power Output Higher.

A sign considered healthy was an increase in bank clearings from $4,261,026,000 for the first week in September to $6,401,824,000 for the last week of the month.

Another was an increase in electric power output from 1,809,716,000 kilowatt hours for the last week in August to 1,851,541,000 last week.

Car loadings, however, after jumping from 679,861 to 707,644, slumped to 630,771 in the figures announced yesterday.

The average price of all stocks, which was 48.7 the day before President Roosevelt's announcement, and then jumped to the year's high, had fallen off to 48.1, and bond averages had slumped from 68.1 to 68.5.

Some of the month's more encouraging developments included:

Announcement by United States Steel of a $140,000,000 program for plant changes and improvements.

The Federal Housing Administration's report of an increase in the number of modernization and repair notes handled by financial institutions.

Declaration during September of 64 extra dividends, as compared with 45 a year ago; and increased dividends in 44 securities as against 22.

A report showing that the resources of the Bankers Trust Co., of New York, had passed the billion-dollar mark for the first time.

Bank, Insurance Securities Dip

New York, Oct. 8.—New York City bank stocks closed last week at lower levels, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on October 4 amounted to $1,426,282,000, compared with $1,457,752,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $31,470,000, or 2.16 per cent. The low for the year, reached on April 30, was $1,226,175,000.

Insurance stocks also registered a decline during the week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues closed the week at $614,290,000, compared with $621,615,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $7,325,000, or 1.18 per cent. The low for the year, reached on March 14, was $484,613,000.

Sales and Collections Improve in September

New York, Oct. 8.—A decided improvement in wholesale collections and sales during September in 100 major markets throughout the country is noticeable in the October survey by the National Association of Credit Men, released yesterday.

In the previous month's survey, approximately 38 per cent of the reporting cities found collections to be "good" compared with the current average of 49 per cent. In sales the previous average of cities reporting "good" had been 40 per cent of the total reports, this figure rising to 58 per cent in the present survey. Washington sales are classified as "fair" and collections "good."

Chemical Demand Advances Prices

New York, Oct. 8.—Further improvement in demand for a number of heavy and fine chemicals resulted in a preponderance of advances among the price changes made in these markets last week, the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter said today.

Activity increased in sales of materials to the textile, leather, ceramic, glass and electroplating industries. Paint and varnish materials also were active. Interest in the approaching season for 1936 contracts was disturbed by war news from abroad, and both sellers and buyers were cautious.

Copper Sales Heavy At Advanced Prices

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Sales of copper were reported abroad early today as high as 9.10 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports. This is an advance of .05 of a cent from Saturday's high and placed the red metal at the best level in several years.

Private cables to the trade here from London said the turnover in that center at this morning's session was 5,200 tons, the largest in several months.

On the Air Today

WALTER HAMPDEN, veteran stage star last seen on Broadway in 1930, plays the stellar role tonight in Columbia's Cavalcade of America," the premiere in a new weekly series of dramatizations of chapters in American history. Tomorrow night Hampden opens in New York as a star of a new play, "Achilles Had a Heel."

Hampden lends his abilities to an able cast of supporting players who, in this first episode, presents two little-known but poignant chapters in history—one dealing with the men and women of Plymouth and "The Mayflower," the second with a more modern setting, the South Dakota grasshopper plague.

Harold Levey, musical director of Broadway and the films, will direct and write the score for the orchestral transitions. WJSV at 8.

"The O'Neills" return today. They're old friends to many listeners, being the family life of a typical Middle-western American family and having been on the air for a long period. After a summer vacation, "The O'Neills" will be heard Mondays through Fridays, WRC, at 3:45 p. m.

• • • •

With Machael Raffetto still on the sick list and the probability that Paul Barbour, the character Raffetto plays, will be out of the scripts for at least another month, Carlton Morse has located the action of "One Man's Family" at Sky Ranch, home of Claudia and Nicky for the time being.

• • • •

Conrad Thibault features music from "Top Hat," "Two for Tonight" and "Every Night at Eight" in his second Log Cabin Revue, WRC, at 10. Frank Crumit sings one of his novelty songs, and Harry Salter's orchestra spotlights "Merry Widow Medley." . . . John Charles Thomas draws from the concert and light opera for his concert at 9, WMAL: "Do Not Go My Love," "Erlkonig," "Vision Fugitive" and others. And "I'm In the Mood for Love"—just for good measure.

Warden Lawes' dramatized story from his years at Sing Sing, for tonight, is "Legally Sane." This true story of life behind the bars deals with conviction of one of the first women to go to the chair in New York State, WMAL, at 9:30 . . . N. B. C. presents two feature broadcasts—one commemorating Leif Ericsson Day, from Norway, WRC at 2 p. m., and the official ceremonies attending the take-off of the largest airplane ever constructed in America, from near Baltimore, WRC, at 4.

Don't forget Lily Pons sings with Andre Kostelanetz's orchestra, WJSV, at 9. She includes a popular number, "I Wished on the Moon," in her offerings tonight. Kostelanetz highlights "Indian Love Call." David Ross announces.

To Open Lounge—A New Show

R. L. Pollio, manager of the Mayflower, has been busier than the proverbial one-armed paperhanger preparing for the gala opening of the Mayflower's winter lounge tonight. To the right is genial Leon Brusiloff, Peter Borras' Madrillon maestro, who introduces this week a new dinner-supper show and more—a new feminine vocalist, winner of Leon's Saturday night "elimination contest."

Policeman Exonerated On Cruelty Charge

Policeman George B. Reid, of the Fifth Precinct, was found not guilty yesterday by a police trial board after an investigation of his alleged maltreatment of a prisoner. The trials of Officers Menry Mazurski, of the Fifth Precinct, charged his precinct, and John E. O'Neil and with failing to communicate with Jesse R. Birch, both of the Fifth Precinct, charged with making an improper arrest, were continued.

Jury Awards $4,250 In 1933 Auto Fatality

A jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday awarded John McHugh 2d and his sister, Mary McHugh, a verdict of $4,250 for the death of their grandfather, John McHugh, 70, of Philadelphia, who was killed by an automobile in April, 1933.

Through the law firm of Whelan & O'Connell, the grandchildren asserted they had suffered serious damages by the death of Mr. McHugh, who was killed by the automobile of Aloysious D. O'Donnell, 3824 Garfield street northwest.

Stuart Will Contest Scheduled October 15

Lebanon, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—The will of the late Henry C. Stuart, former Governor of Virginia, will be contested before a jury of seven in Russell County Circuit Court on October 15 in a suit brought by Mrs. Mary Stuart Harmon, of Hollywood, Calif., a daughter.

The suit involving the settlement of an estate valued at near $1,000,000 was brought by Mrs. Harmon against four nephews of the former Governor and four other beneficiaries. Mrs. Harmon charges that undue influence was brought to bear by the four nephews upon Stuart, prejudicing her interests.

Time Versus Space Again

By Harry J. Tuthill

Oh Peggy, I'm so worried about the batty stories your father tells of hitch-hiking along the Milky Way, and all that drivel.
Well, that mogul tells the same stories.
Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y. 10-9

A mogul? That stubby little man? He sounds even dippier than your father.
I've read a lot about such things. I mean space isn't really space. It's curved and...

Wait, mother. Let me explain. Space is really another name for time. Or...

Let me think. I read an article in the paper last week...oh yes...suppose you were on the moon when, say, the battle of Waterloo was fought.
Peggy, look at me. Imagine! Two in one family being that way. Oh, oh, oh!

25,459 Employed Here In Motor Industry

Jobs having to do with production and operation of motor vehicles employ 25,459 persons in the District and a total of 5,065,000 persons in the United States, according to the American Automobile Association. "These figures," said a statement released yesterday, "cover workers in motor vehicle manufacturing establishments, petroleum refining, sales and servicing units, Federal and State road construction, truck and bus drivers and raw material workers. They do not take into consideration other millions of workers who depend more or less indirectly upon motor transportation for their jobs."

More than $27,000,000 is paid out to parking lots and storage garages each year, the auto club stated.

Grain Supply Gains.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: Wheat increased 1,797,000; corn increased 103,000; oats increased 962,000; rye increased 243,000; barley increased 1,275,000.

Episcopal Province Session Opens Today

The annual provincial conference of the Third Province, Episcopal Church, will open today at St. Monica's Church, South Capitol and L streets. The meeting will last 3 days.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver an address of welcome. The Rev. E. S. Thomas, of Germantown, Pa., will preach the conference sermon.

$100,000,000 Bills Overbid 3.15 Times

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Coolidge announces that the tenders for two series of Treasury bills, to be dated October 9, 1935, which were offered on October 4, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on Monday.

Tenders were invited for $100,000,000, and $315,724,000 was applied for.

Blame for Maryland's Problem Placed on Government.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8.—Maryland's relief problem, due to reach a crisis November 1 when direct Federal relief is discarded, can only be cleared by expeditious action from Washington in releasing ample Government funds for WPA work in the State or by temporary continuation of FERA funds until works-relief projects fully absorb those on dole, State observers believe.

Marylanders close to the relief problems visualized chaos if the Federal Government does not immediately appropriate more funds of the $60,000,000 State PWA program still pending final approval in Washington or continue direct relief beyond November 1 until works projects have altogether depleted relief roles.

They place the blame for Maryland's dilemna directly on Washington, claiming that the governmental units of the State have all submitted plans for PWA work-relief projects on time but the various changes in the national administration's policy and the clashes between works-relief administrators in Washington have caused the delay in awarding money to Maryland.

The Government was taken to task for its sudden decision to change from direct relief to WPA works after Maryland, in a feverish legislative battle last spring, passed the emergency 1 per cent gross receipts tax to meet demands from Washington before direct relief to the State could flow.

Furthermore, it was claimed, the coneroversy between Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator and Harold Ickes, PWA chieftain, held back funds for operation of the new system of work relief for a time. They charge a month's standstill resulted when John N. Mackall, former State WPA administrator who resigned, battled with Hopkins over work projects for Maryland.

They doubt now whether it is humanely possible even if funds for the entire construction program for Maryland are immediately available, for those on direct relief to be put to work by November 1.

PWA Project Started.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—One of Maryland's Public Works Administration projects has been started and bids will be opened this month on three more, it was said today at the office of Abel Wolman, PWA regional administrator.

Meanwhile, Francis H. Dryden, State works progress administrator, said he had asked for 1,000 men from relief rolls this week to go to work on PWA projects.

The PWA job which has started is construction of a new building at the Eastern Shore State Hospital at Cambridge. This work was begun last week but more than a score of men already are employed on it.

Cambridge Sewer Project.

Bids on a Cambridge sewer project and for construction of an addition to the Spring Grove State Hospital at Catonsville will be opened this week. Opening of bids on the first of Baltimore City's PWA projects is tentatively set for October 23.

Bids have been asked for two Delaware projects, for sewer construction at Dover and Rehoboth. One will be opened October 21 and one October 28.

PWA officials said the Cambridge and Catonsville projects probably would be started within three weeks of the time the bids are opened.

May Place 1,000 More.

Dryden said that in addition to the 1,000 men he has asked for, it may be possible to place another thousand. More than 1,200 already are at work on various federally and locally sponsored projects.

He said also that all but four of the WPA county projects for which he has money have been started. One exception is Cumberland, where the town is involved in a dispute with a local traction company about car tracks in the streets to be improved. Another is a small project in Glen Burnie.

Hearing Set Oct. 23 In Trooper's Slaying

Palmyra, Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Trial Justice B. W. Seay, of Fluvanna County, today set October 23 for preliminary hearing for John Daugherty, 27, of Charlottesville, on charges of killing State Trooper W. R. Thompson in an attempted holdup of a Fork Union bank on September 23.

Immediately following this case John Spoon and Grant Mills, Tennessee youths, charged with patricipating in the robbery attempted with Daugherty, will be given a hearing.

Best, by Cracky!

Parsons, W. Va., Oct. 8.—Wade Gainer, of St. George, will be presented with a certificate signed by Gov. H. G. Kump declaring him to be the best gardner in the county relief set-up. His garden was chosen as the best in Tucker County raised from seeds given out by the relief office.

Dogs Ready for Fredericksburg Mart

Suspect Alters Story in Death Of Rural Pair

Young Man Now Says Wife Shot Husband, Wounded Self in Struggle.

By the Associated Press.

Wise, Va., Oct. 8.—Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greear of Wise County said today that Russel Hubbard, who is charged with the slaying of Mr. and Mrs. Ray McCarty in the Birchfield section, had altered his account of how the 30-year-old woman was killed.

The prosecutor has questioned Hubbard several times since the bodies of the McCarty couple were found on a road near their home last Tuesday morning.

Hubbard, who is 24, last week was quoted by Sheriff J. P. Adams as saying that he and McCarty left the latter's home together and that Mrs. McCarty ran after them and wrested a shotgun from one of the men. He said, the sheriff reported, that the woman shot her husband, then herself.

Greear today said Hubbard now declares that he went to the house and asked McCarty to help him in killing a mad dog. The mountaineer's wife was said to have objected. Hubbard said the woman followed them out and after shooting her husband, declared:

"Now, we're rid of him."

Hubbard was quoted as replying: "Now, you have killed him, I want that gun."

In the struggle for its possession, he told Commonwealth's attorney, the gun was discharged, fatally wounding Mrs. McCarty.

It was said that a preliminary hearing would not be held for the prisoner and that his case will be laid before the grand jury in Wise Circuit Court October 21.

1933 Bank Holdup Charged to Convict

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairfield, Pa., Oct. 8.—Detainers have been placed against Harry Carbaugh, of near Mont Alto, who will be charged with the holdup of the National Bank here in 1933. Carbaugh will complete a term on the chain gang in Tennessee later this month and he will be brought here to answer the bank-robbery charge.

The local bank was held up by a lone bandit who obtained $659 and fled in a stolen car. The car was found burned in the mountains near here some weeks later.

Robert B. Martin, cashier, and Arthur M. Moore, assistant cashier, were in the bank when the bandit held them up with a revolver and scooped up all money in sight. State troopers trailed him into the mountains, but he eluded them. Nearly a year later Carbaugh, who had been the object of the search, was located in Tennessee, where he was serving a three-year sentence for robbery.

500 Expected To Be Entered For Dog Mart

Exhibition and Sale to Be Held Oct. 17 in Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 8.—That 50 0animals would be entered for exhibition, trade or sale in the dog mart which will be held in the city park October 17 was indicated today as the committee in charge virtually completed arrangements. An attendance of 5,000 persons is expected.

Registration of dogs will take place from 9:30 to 11 a. m. and judging will be from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. Nat Kinsey, local town crier, will action dogs from 2 until 4 p. m. Ribbons will be pinned on the best three dogs in the several classes.

The committee in charge, headed by Jesse Burgess, consists of W. Marshall King, Leo Timberlake, J. L. Pyne, Dr. J. Minor Holloway and E. A. Gibson.

Miss Benedict Honored.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 8.—Miss Helen B. Benedict, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas G. Benedict, has been elected first president of the co-ed trjbunal, the student governing body at Gettysburg College. In that capacity she will represent the women students on the men's tribunal.

Boy, Girl Dead In Fire, Father Badly Burned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Oct. 8.—Guy Lee Shelton, 5, and Berlin Shook, 14, were burned to death early yesterday when the residence of Claude Shelton, father of Guy Shelton, was destroyed by fire at Flag Pond, Tenn., near here.

Shelton was badly burned in attempting to save the children, sleeping in an upstairs room. He was overcome by smoke and fell to the floor. Stumbling to his feet, he pitched through a window onto a porch, rolling off into the yard. He was taken to the Veterans' Hospital at Johnson City, Tenn., where he is expected to recover.

A neighboring boy, who also attempted to reach the children, barely escaped being burned to death as the steps leading to the room caved in. He saved himself by jumping.

Shelton had built a fire in a downstairs room shortly before and sparks from the flue were believed to have set fire to the house.

County Fair Begins Well In Frederick

Prospects of Annual Fete Held Brightest in Six Years.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 8.—The seventy-fifth annual Frederick County Fair opened today with the brightest prospects in six years.

It was children's day, and hundreds of boys and girls, admitted free, swarmed the grounds.

Among the exhibits were 82-pound pumpkins, 1,700-pound bulls and 14-inch corn. Vegetables and grains of all kinds produced in Frederick County were on display.

There also were profuse displays of household goods, canned goods, art and needlework. The exhibit of farm machinery was said to be the largest shown in years. It was valued at $50,000.

The track was in excellent condition for the races. Grandstand attractions were offered in the afternoon and night, with Troop F, U. S. Cavalry, Fort Myer, Va., giving afternoon and evening drills.

Court Hears Appeal On Fatality Claim

Compensation Case Opens Maryland Term.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8.—The fall term of the Maryland Court of Appeals began today with eight jurors hearing arguments on an appeal taken from a decision rendered by the Allegany County Court by Mrs. Minnie A. Robertson, who is seeking compensation for her husband's death.

The body of Resley Robertson, who had worked 25 years for the North American Refractories, manufacturers of brick, was found June 22, 1933. He had suffered burns.

Mrs. Robertson brought suit against her husband's employers; the State industrial accident commission, which claimed Robertson's death did not result from injuries in course of employment, and the Royal Indemnity Co., insurers.

Attorneys for Mrs. Robertson, Edward J. Ryan and Taylor Morrison, claimed the injuries were sustained by Robertson while firing a brick kiln. Daniel E. Klein and George Henderson, appelees' attorney, contended the burns were superficial, citing a doctor's report which said death "obviously due to disease of the left coronary artery."

C. of C. Will Meet At Haymarket, Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., Oct. 8.—The Manassas-Prince William Chamber of Commerce will hold its meeting tomorrow night at the Haymarket Masonic Hall with Verbon Kemp, general secretary of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, speaking on "Town and County Chambers of Commerce."

A discussion is expected on the improvement of the surrounding county roads.

The Chamber of Commerce and the Manassas Battlefield Park Association have recommended opening the Manassas Battle Park October 11-20 to all visitors with free guide service and no entrance fee. The arrangement will accommodate visitors of the fifth annual Piedmont Virginia Dairy Festival here Thursday and Friday.

Flying Liner To Carry 46 Set for Test

Newest Pan American Clipper Ready Now for Service.

Builders Have Tried Out Great Plane During Nine Months.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—The Flying Clipper No. 7, 4-motored 46-passenger luxury liner, will go aloft tomorrow afternoon for its first flight under ownership of Pan American Airways.

Glenn L. Martin, president of the plant that built the ship, will present the certificate of ownership to Juan T. Trippe, Pan American president.

The Clipper has undergone nine months of tests and flown thousands of miles over the Chesapeake Bay region. It was designed for transpacific service.

When the huge plane, weighing 51,000 pounds fully loaded, takes off tomorrow, she will be complete from the latest aerial navigation wrinkles to the tiny silver spoons with which passengers may stir their demi-tasse.

Thirty of the 46 upholstered chairs may be converted into berths and so thoroughly has the Clipper been sound-proofed that the roar of her 3,200 horsepower will be scarcely audible to sleepers.

Orange Stockmen Hear Sale Rules

New Stock Yard to Provide Cattle Market Ner Construc

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orange, Va., Oct. 8.—A meeting of the Orange Stock Yards, Inc., was held at the courthouse here yesterday to acuaint producers with rules and regulations governing sales beginning here November 1.

M. W. Carter presided and explained that a $1 charge would be made on sale of each animal weighing as much as 400 pounds, and 50 cents for animals under 400 pounds. A selling charge of 50 cents will be made on veals and 25 cents for hogs, sheep and lambs. All animals will be insured at market value on delivery at the yards on the morning of sale. For this protection producers will pay one-half of 1 per cent of the selling price of each animal.

The yards, now under construction, adjoin the Chesapeake & Ohio and Virginia Central railroads. The object of the organization is to provide a market for the sale of all live stock, giving producers and shippers Baltimore market prices, less charges.

Manassas Fete To Have Parade With 50 Floats

Annual Piedmont Festival, Scheduled on Friday, Fifth to Be Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., Oct. 8.—Floats of the floral queen and princesses will lead more than 50 floats, entered by Piedmont counties and cities, in the "Milky Way" parade of the fifth annual Piedmont Dairy Festival, to be held here Friday.

The number of float and parade entries exceeds that of previous festivals.

Music for the marching units, comprising school, civic and agricultural organizations, will be furnished by the Quantico Marine Band, the Culpeper Municipal Band, the Fifth Reserve Brigade and the Independent Boys Band of Washington.

Approximately 200 northern Virginia boys will compete in the dairy judging contests scheduled to begin early Friday morning. The winners will have a special part in the pageant later in the morning.

Band and orchestral concerts, led by Leon Brusiloff and Ray Francis, will open the program at "Annaburg" at 10:30 a. m. This will be followed by interpretative autumn dances by the Callaway School of Dance and a program by a group of 40 girls representing the Fredericksburg State Teachers College Choral Club.

Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, assisted by the Rev. A. Stuart Gibson, rector of Dettingen Parish, will officiate at the coronation ceremonies of Miss Rebecca Rice, queen of the festival.

The queen, attended by her maids of honor and princesses, will then review the pageant, "Around the Clock With the Milkman." More than 1,000 Prince William school will have parts in the pageant.

Box and grand stand seats to accommodate several thousand spectators have been provided and amplifying equipment has been installed.

Two dances will be held, the festival ball on Thursday evening, preceding the program, and the queen's ball on Friday evening. Both will be held in the Manassas gymnasium.

Hill Asserts Aid of Police Was Pledged

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Oct. 8.—Kendall C. Hill, former hospital attendant on trial for the murder of Albert Atwell, Baltimore taxi driver, testified today State police promised to aid him if he "came clean."

It was the first time Hill had taken the stand since his trial began before a jury of farmers in circuit court for the slaying of Atwell near Havre de Grace September 17 in a $4 hold-up.

Hill's attorney, State Senator Harold Cobourn, had him testify as part of his fight to block the admission in evidence of Hill's alleged confession to State police.

State's Attorney D. Paul McNabb had four State officers take the stand to deny any pressure or promises. Hill testified he was grilled by "seven or eight" officers.

Hill told Cobourn he was informed of his constitutional rights "after the examination started."

After Cobourn repeatedly had objected to admission of the reputed confession in evidence, the court ruled that testimony should be given on that question alone until it was settled.

Hill took the stand just before the luncheon recess and the State began its testimony after the recess.

Augusta Sheriff Named To Represent Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 8.—Augusta Sheriff G. M. Gilkerson, of Fisherville, was appointed by Gov. Peery yesterday to represent Virginia at the sixty-fifth annual convention of the American Prison Association to be held at Atlanta, Ga., October 27-31.

The appointment was signed by Peter Saunders, secretary of the Commonwealth, and by the Governor.

2 Held in Still Raid.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 8.—Federal officers arrested William and Clarence Martz, following a raid in the northern part of Washington County, when two 50-gallon stills and mash and whisky were seized. They were released on $300 bond for Federal grand jury action when arraigned before United States Commissioner D. Angle Wolfinger here.

Watches Louis Yawn as New Threat Fights

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—During its spare time on the last World Series trip, this department managed to eye-witness two sets of prize fights and one Big Ten football game and is now ready to report on same. One prize fight was in the Olympia Stadium in Detroit, another in the Giant Chicago Stadium in Chicago, and the ball game was a night spectacle involving Purdue and Northwestern, two conference teams. The warning for seconds to leave the ring in Detroit is a siren such as the motorcycle cops use to scare the hell out of you. It scares the hell out of you there, too.

They have no judges in Detroit. That's swell. Sam Hennessy, one of the best referees in the country, and who always appears in the Intercity New York-Chicago Golden Gloves matches, handled all of the bouts. No sooner does the final bell ring and before the echoes have died away he raises the arm of the winner, and that's that.

In Chicago, the guy still plays the organ between rounds and it still drives me nuts. You get all worked up watching a couple of guys pounding one another and bleeding and falling down and getting up, the bell rings and your ears are voilently assaulted by some popular song or football march hurled at you fortissimo. Both fights were put on to try to catch some of the World Series crowd, and both were fought practically in private.

In Detroit Nate Lewis and Scotty Monteith joined to produce an affair between Lorenzo Pack, the new colored heavyweight sensation. and a party by the name of Dutch Weimer. You remember Scotty Monteith, don't you? He used to be around our town for years when he managed Johnny Dundee. Pack is another product of the Chicago Tribune golden gloves tournament. He isn't much.

I WAS a little disturbed by this fight, because I thought that eventually, After many experimental trips to the floor, Weimer succumbed to a light punch to the ulna bone. They threw the towel in for him from his own corner. Still I do not know why I should complain. For years it has been the colored man who has had to wear the manacles in the ring. If there were turn about, it would only be fair play.

Joe Louis and his court attended the bouts in Detroit. It was really most ompressive. They all sat up in the working press row. During the intermission Louis was surrounded by ushers and uniformed policemen who kept off the autograph hunters. I saw a number of Nordic ladies fighting bitterly with ushers and clawing at them to get at Louis and his sacred signature. That was impressive, too, but in a different way.

Louis was taking a gander at Pack because someone said he might have to fight him some day. He yawned. Damon Runyan spoke the truest line about Louis. He said, "Louis spoils you for looking at any other fighter." It is quite so. After watching the grim efficiency of Louis operating on an opponent you go crazy watching the other boys fiddle around, missing, clinching, wasting punches . . .

IN Chicago I saw Bobby Pacho, Baby Arizmendi and a good light-heavyweight by the name of Mickey Dugan. Also a fine little featherweight, a C. Y. O. boy by the name of Jimmy Christie. Christie, only a year out of the Chicago amateurs, gave the experienced Arizmendi plenty of trouble until he tired. The little Mexican featherweight is a strange looking person. He has an enormous head, perched on a tiny body. They say he wears a 16¼ collar, and he looks it. Pacho was supposed to fight Frankie Wallace from Cleveland, but a substitute appeared and Pacho stiffened him.

This Mickey Dugan they brought on from Cleveland was a pip. Runyon tells me that by profession he is a stick man in a crap game, and wont' train. But he knocked out Clinton Bridges in Chicago, and Bridges was the colored boy they were really touting as another Joe Louis. They gave Dugan Max Marek to fight, and 14 pounds was too much for the Irishman to give away. At that he came close to knocking Marek out with a right hand drive. If he were properly handled and trained he would be a swell addition to our dreadful light-heavyweight class.

The night football game at Dyche Stadium was a superb spectacle. I have never seen such lighting at any night sports event. Between halves, the lights were doused, and the Purdue band of some 200 pieces paraded, each man furnished with an electric torch. All you could see were the lights, moving mysteriously on the field far below, forming letters and figures, twisting and winding in a ghostly parade behind stirring music. As a grand finale, they illuminated the giant bass drum on a wagon, and the horns of the tuba players, with electric lights, and the drum major twirled a baton that was a burning brand. We don't see things like that back East.

Mrs. Bowden, Mrs. Walper Trounced

Mrs. Morrow Is Victor; Miss Faunce Defeats Mrs. Platt.

THHe defending champion, Mrs. David H. Clark, of Washington, and the medalist, young Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., led the way yesterday into the second round of the Middle Atlantic women's golf championship over the Congressional course.

Mrs. Clark, who won a year ago, defeated Mrs. Leo Walper, of Washington, 6 to 4. Mrs. Clark, 2 up on the first nine, won four straight holes starting with the eleventh to rout her opponent.

Miss Harper, who defeated Mrs. Clark on the nineteenth hole last week in Richmond to win the Virginia State championship, ran away with Mrs. A. M. Bowden, of Washington, 7 up after the first nine holes, Miss Harper, who was a finalist in this tournament a year ago and who won the medal round Monday, won the first two holes on the bac knine to close out the match, 9 and 7.

Wins Only One Hole.

Mrs. Bowden won only one hole, the eighth, where Miss Harper needed three putts. Miss Harper shot the first nine holes in 39, one under par, and finished the engagement still one under par, with par figures winning the tenth and eleventh holes.

Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of Baltimore, who has won the tournament several times, defeated Mrs. L. G. Pray, 3 and 2, while Mrs. T. E. Schleuderberg, Baltimore, won from Mrs. F. J. Godfrey, Washington, 2 and 1. Mrs. Schleuderberg, who was 1 down at the turn, rallied on the back stretch to defeat her Washington opponent.

Mrs. Roland MacKenzie, Washington, defeated Miss Elizabeth Janneyl, Baltimore, 3 and 1, after having established a 4-up lead after the first nine holes.

Miss Dettweiler Wins.

In other matches, Miss Halen Dettweiler, Washington, defeated Miss Louise Claytor, Washington, 4 and 2; Miss Winifred Faunce, Washington, defeated Mrs. L. B. Platt, ashington, 4 and 3; Mrs. Betty Meckley, the Maryland champion, defeated Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Washington, 4 and 3.

In today's second round, Mrs. Clark meets Miss Dettweiler, Miss Faunce meets Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Meckley meets Mrs. T. E. Schleuderberg and Mrs. MacKenzie meets Miss Harper.

OklahomaFans 'Crazy' About Biff Jones

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 7 (AP).—Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones has the cow country pigskin crazy.

His University of Oklahoma football team has won two games in a row—and this Sooner State, already overflowing with color since the Cherokee Strip drive, has had to admit there are new heights to the spectacular. Always an avid football State, Oklahoma is being given a new taste of the "big time" game. Last Saturday, Jones, former coach at Army and Louisiana State, had his light sophomore back field execute a neat triple pass in walloping New Mexico, 25 to 0.

Some Jones innovations:

Even the water department has been changed. At time-outs in the olden days a belabored trainer trotted out carrying water in jugs or milk buckets. Now, the water goes out in a rubber-tired cart, manned by two peppy huskies.

The tougher going lies ahead, but the thousands who used to wail when good-looking Oklahoma teams lumbered to defeat have confidence in the man who dropped out at Louisiana State after drawing the ire of the late Senator Huey P. Long.

Women in Golf Final.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Octo. 8.—Mrs. Walter C. Capper gained the right to play Mrs. Fred T. Small for the women's fall golf championship of the Cumberland Country Club by defeating Mrs. Arthur P. Dixon, 7 and 6. The final match will be staged this week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 8.—Virginia Tech's gridiron wardrums are beating, beating on into the darkness this week as the Tech cadets—team and corps—prepare to invade Richmond, Saturday, for the William and Mary game.

Storm signals are aloft and war clouds are hovering over the field where the Gobblers are sharpening their claws for combat. The Techmen are not counting on a kindly Dame Fortune who has come to their rescue several times in recent tilts with the Indians. The game this week is to be the thirteenth between the rival clans.

The Gobblers are bent upon blazing their own touchdown trail in Richmond stadium. Not even gathering darkness is halting the preparations. The proteges of Henry Redd and Tex Tilson are going through some new maneuvers this week. They have some new tricks to trap unwary Indian gridmen, if any.

Dizzy Taciturn As Baseball Tour Flops

Barely Making Expenses, Asserts Paul; Would Cancel Games.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 7.—Dizzy Dean's barnstorming tour is a financial flop—so far, at least. As a result, the usually loquacious pitching star of the St. Louis Cardinals is taciturn.

A week ago, when the tour of about 20 scheduled games opened in Springfield, Mo., Dizzy predicted he'd "make more money on this trip than in a whole season with the Cards."

Today, Dizzy laconically used only one word—and a frown—to describe the turnouts, "fair."

But his barnstorming pals, Paul Dean and Mike Ryba, also of the St. Louis Nationals, admitted here yesterday they "barely are making expenses" and that they would cancel the remaining scheduled games if possible.

4,300 Cash Customers.

Dizzy was elated at a turnout of 4,300 cash customers in Springfield. But he overlooked the fact Springfield fans will flock to Whiteway Park any time to see him, Brother Paul and Ryba. Paul and Mike helped Springfield win some Western Association championships.

Cold weather has cut attendance and the tour also ran afoul of World Series competition. Dizzy gazed disconsolately on great stretches of vacant seats in Muehlebach Field while he played seven innings of an exhibition game here Sunday.

The fact Dizzy and Paul aren't the national heroes they were a year ago after leading St. Louis to a National League flag and world championship also probably figures in the decreased attendance.

They played before about 900 at St. Joseph, Mo., last night and went to St. Louis today. The schedule calls for continuing the exhibitions east and south.

Work Is Resumed By Mt. St. Mary's

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 8.—Gaining considerable confidence after a victory over Canisius in the opening game of their season on Sunday, the Mount St. Mary's College football squad today began preparations for the game next Saturday with Delaware.

Head Coach Joe Lawler spent much of today's drill in correcting errors committed in the first game. He stated, however, that these errors were not particularly serious in view of the fact that the Mount team was composed almost entirely of boys performing in their first collegiate contest.

In preparing for Saturday's game the Mountaineers are fully aware of the task that awaits them. Undefeated in two contests, the Delaware eleven is enjoying one of its most successful seasons in several years.

No changes are planned by Lawler in the team's starting line-up. Corning Smyth again will handle the quarter back position. Frank Apichella will be at fullback, with Frank Shemonsky and Charley Reilly at half back.

Allegany High Meets Ferndale Friday Night

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 8.—Only one football game is billed in Cumberland scholastic circles this weekend, Allegany High meeting Ferndale (Pa.) High at Community Park in a night game Friday. In another Friday game, Pat Conway takes his LaSalle Institute eleven to Altoona to battle Catholic High on Cricket Field.

Saturday, Pennsylvania Avenue High gets its first test of the year, with Waynesboro High in the Pennsylvania town. Ridgeley High plays at Keyser High Saturday.

Two Records Broken In Races at Agawam

Agawam Park, Mass., Oct. 8 (AP). Track records crashed and fell today before the largest week day crowd of the meeting.

Toano, Miss L. C. White's 4-year-old bay filly, made a new track record for 5½ furlongs when she won the second race in 1:06, and H. D. Cox's Black Falcon stepped a mile in 1:49 2-5, to lower the record, which had been held by Winged Flight.

Grimm Content To Stand Pat Next Year

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Charlie Grimm is convinced his Cubs, as now constituted, can win the National League pennant next year world's championship, too.

"I am satisfied to stand pat on the present line-up," Grimm said to the squad we no whave is good for day. "And intend to do it. I think three or four years more, and I am going to string along with them. Of course, I would like to get another starting pitcher, but I will not weaken the club in other departments to make a trade to get one."

Still Gentlemums.

"They are still gentlemums, great big gentlemums so far as I am concerned," Grimm said. "They were nice gentlemums when they won, and they still are."

The only unfinished business of the world's series is the mailing of the players' check, and a verdict, if any, by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, in the Cub-Moriarty squabble.

According to official figures, each Cub player will receive $4,554.58, including the radio money, while the victorious Tigers will get $6,574.08.

Grimm said that if any of his players are fined, he would pay the money out of his own pocket.

Grimm, Woody English and Tuck Stainback were chased by Umpire Moriarty for using ungentlemanly language, according to the umpire. The Cubs charged Moriarty with cursing them.

Second Quiz Held.

Landis held "court" Saturday with the players involved, and another inquiry at Detroit yesterday in regard to Jurges' language after being called out at the plate after a close play in Chicago Sunday.

The commissioner has given no indication when he will announce his verdict, if any.

Pitcher Lon Warneke of the Cubs returned to the hills of the Ozarks today, hoping that the shoulder injury he suffered Sunday will not affect his career next season. Manager Grimm and Trainer Andy Lotshaw believe that inasmuch as no muscle or ligament was torn a few weeks' rest will have the star right-hander back into condition.

Celanese Nine Annexes Interstate Loop Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 8.—The championship of the nterstate Baseball League was decided at Community Park when Joe Barley's Celanese Association team grouped four hits vith two hit batsmen and four passes for 7 runs in the second inning to defeat the American Legion club, of this city, in the fifth and deciding game of the series, 9 to 5.

The victory climaxed a remarkable comeback on the part of the Silkmen, who were trailing, two games to one, in the series before they won the title by bagging the last two battles.

Appalachia High Wins.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Appalachia, Va., Oct. 8.—Appalachia High squeezed over a third period touchdown here to defeat Pennington Gap, 7 to 0. It was the third straight victory for Appalachia. Ireson carried the oval across and then kicked goal.

Tigers Feast on "Cub Steak" At Dinner, 50 Years in Making

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 8.—Those new champions of the baseball world, the Tigers of Detroit, pulled their chairs up to the banquet board tonight for a "Cub steak" victory feast, an event that has been 50 years in the making.

The baseball ghosts of two former managers, Hughie Jennings and Ty Cobb, and many another of the diamond's heroes of the past, hovered over the banquet a little enviously, probably cheering themselves hoarse like everyone else in this baseball-mad town.

The victory dinner was jammed by all those who had $5 for a plate and the strength to squeeze in, and who in Detroit tonight didn't have $5? This old fur-trading post, still nursing an awful headache and waving the Cubs' scalp after one of the wildest, most pubilant World Series celebrtaions ever known, bet its shirt on the Tigers to take Chicago, and the shirt came back all done up in vest, coat, pants, tie and derby.

There as a governor and a mayor and a dozen other other dignataries there from official life ith bouquets of nice ords for the victors, but they played second-fiddle to the nely-croned champions of baseball.

The $5 plate holders could see, outstanding in the throng, the smiling old gentleman with the bald head who had thought he could never smile again—Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit Baseball Company.

For 32 years he held the purse strings of the Detroit Tigers, waiting and hoping for a World Series winner. He has had five pennants, three of them in a row in the days of Jennings and Cobb, and two under the current reign of Mickey Cochrane.

Now, if he never gets another, he probably wouldn't care greatly. He tried to beat the Cubs in 1907 and 1908, and missed. He tried again to clean the Gas House Gang from St. Louis a year ago, and missed again. But this year his club clicked against the Cubs.

On noe side of Navin was Manager Mike and on the other Leon "The Goose" Goslin, a pair of veterans of the baseball wars who ended up the sixth game of the World Series with a pair of blows that left 48,000 wildly-cheering fans gasping for breath.

Outside the packed banquet room, collective Detroit still moved dizzily after the roaring World Series night, still a little tired and very hoarse, still wondering why it threw all the telephone books out the windows and battled mounted policeman for a chance to push street cars off the track.

But the city took its headache philosophically today. After all, it only happens once in a lifetime or once in 50 years.

Emory—Henry to Meet Chattanooga Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emory, Va., Oct. 8.—Emory and Henry College's Wasps, who defeated King College here Saturday night, will have the football picture all to themselves in the Bristol region this week when they clash with Chattanooga here Saturday night. It will be the Emory and Henry home-coming game.

Emory's victory over King stfrengthened a growing conviction that the Wasps, despite the number of young sophomores on the squad, are developing rapidly. The team looked vastly improved last week over its performance against Carson-Newman.

Dr. Heintz Gains Final In Cumberland Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 8.—Dr. Karl P. Heintz advanced to the finals of the men's fall golf tournament at the Cumberland Country Club by defeating George Schwarzenbach 3d, 4 and 2, and gained the right to play Frank Blaul for the championship.

10,000 Watch Luckite Win In Chase

Martin's Gelding 3 Lengths Ahead of Forbus at Rolling Rock.

By the Associated Press.

LIGONIER, Pa., Oct. 8.—Luckite, a black gelding owned by J. W. Y. Martin, of Glyndon, Md., won the Rolling Rock Hunt Cup Steeplechase over a 3-mile course before more than 10,000 at the Rolling Rock Country Club today.

Luckite was 3 lengths ahead of Forbus, owned by L. W. Robinson, jr. Samuel Untermyer's Bagatelle, the favrite, was a poor third, with Mrs. Arthur White's Byzantine fourth.

Luckite's time was 6:22 3-5. By his victory the Martin entry became the favorite for the King's Cup race, feature event, set for Friday. Only four of the six starters today finished.

Missing Caddy, Gelding, Sold to Mrs. Whitney

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Upperville, Va., Oct. 8.—Missing Caddy, the roan-mottled bay gelding which Dr. A. C. Randolph, master of the Piedmont Hounds, brought to the horse show ring this season, has been purchased by Mrs. John Hay Whitney.

Missing Caddy first attracted the attention of horsemen at the Foxcroft Horse Show, where he won the open green hunter class. He won the championship of the Loudoun Hunt Horse Show, held on the estate of Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, in June. Later he added another blue to his winnings in the class for hunter hacks at Upperville.

Levinsky 8-5 Choice Over Gallagher

By Bill McCormick.

KING LEVINSKY, the erstwhile herring dispenser, ruled an 8-to-5 favorite over Marty Gallagher, the Foggy Bottom fist flipper, on the eve of their crucial ten-round glove-waving contest at Griffith Stadium tonight.

Levinsky was favored only in the money betting, as Gallenghher, always a local idol, ruled an overwhelming sentimental favorite to defeat the king of the fishes.

Surprisingly brisk advance sales for the last day or two indicate to the jaundiced eyes of Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn a near-record crowd, if the weather is good.

Late last night Turner and his cohorts freely predicted that at last 7,000 persons would be on hand to watch the two colorful heavyweights swing into action, if subzero climatic conditions did not prevail.

La Fond Due to Referee.

Although, under the rules of the Boxing Commission no official announcement can be made until ringtime of the referee to handle a bout, it generally is conceded that Eddie LaFond will act as third man in the ring. Levinsky, through his managers, had requested that Maj. Harvey L. Heinie) Miller be assigned the task, but the request was denied.

"I have passed up several other important shots to get a crack at Levinsky," insisted Gallagher. "I wouldn't do this if I weren't certain of defeating the King. I believe that a good left jab at long range and a two-fisted body attack in close will not only give me a win over the King—but a knockout."

"Who is dis guy Gallagher?" queried Levinsky. "I haven't heard of him since 1928. That's when he stopped being a top fighter, an' I don't see where he belongs in the same ring with me—the great King fish. He's easy to bowl over, ah

Irish Ted, Happy Inver Win to Pay $441.60 Double at Laurel

Tabitha, $5, Is Victor in Feature

Flaming Mamie Second; Best Bid Runs Third; 8,000 See Races.

Best Bid might have made it a close contest but she was posing on her hind legs like a park statue when the start came and, after being rushed into a contending position, tired in the stretch drive.

The big daily double was the result of victories by Irish Ted, a $68.60 betting proposition in his own right, and Happy Inver a $19.20 shot. Irish Ted surprised by taking the lead at the break and, with Bobby Merritt hustling in the saddle, the issue was never in doubt. Play Chance made a fast stretch rush from a slow beginning to take second money from the favored Mephisto.

Happy Inver also ran an "on-top" race. Jockey Harry Richards lost no time in sending the daughter of Happy Argo into command and the 4-yaer-old was just galloping at the end.

Steeplechase Upset.

As usual, the day's steeplechase resulted in an upset. Troyed, masterfuly ridden by Jockey D. McCarthy, set most of the pace while Lei, the favorite was under heavy wraps. With three jumps to go, Lei was turned loose and it appeared that the public choice would win. However, Troyer had something left and managed to cling to his advantage between the last fence and the finish. Soughton Boy was third by default as Bay Broom lost the rider at the final jump. Clonard, the only other finisher was far back. Brad forfeited his chances by running out of the course at the fourth fence.

Masked Bele with the veteran Mack Garner in the saddle won the fourth race from Amijo and Wedge Lad. The Compton filly was rated during the early running and closed with a rush to bring the favorite players a $4.70 mutuel.

Merely, at an $11.60 mutuel, accounted for the fifth race by the simple method of being restrained behind Sassaby for most of the way and then putting on steam when turned loose in the stretch.

Behemoth came from far back to be third in the field of nine.

Bread ing, with Jockey Booker in the saddle, surprised the customers by making every post a winning one in the seventh race to pay a $50.80 mutuel. The half-mile track sprinter just ankled along and failed to quit as many thought he would. Jakovia, the favorite, was second and Dalmatia was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRISH TED, $68.60, $23.60, $9.30; PLAY CHANCE, $6.20, $3.70; MEPHISTO, $2.50.

IRISH TED, sent up fast on the inside, assumed the lead at the turn, then was kept under stout pressure to withstand PLAY CHANCE. The latter, slow to gain his best stride, bettered his position on the outside and came with a belated rush at the end. MEPHISTO, forced to race on the outside, entered contention when straightened into the home stretch and finished willingly. OLD IRONSIDES, stoutly handled from the beginning, weakened after five furlongs.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000. The Fairfax Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:04. Off at 2:04½. Winner, Mrs. James Park's b. g. (4), by Trojan—Moll Cutpurse II. Trained by E. Young. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:02 3-5 (14 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TROYER, $21.80, $8.90, $5.40; LEI, $4.60, $3.90; SOUGHTON BOY, $6.70.

TROYER took an easy lead after the second fence, jumped faultlessly at all of his jumps thereafter, responded readily to a drive and outstayed LEI approaching the finish. LEI, taken back repeatedly for first mile, challenged strongly when placed to a drive, but failed to gain during the last half-mile. SOUGHTON BOY moved up boldly going to the twelfth fence, but weakened steadily after making a stout bid. CLONARD was strongly restrained for the first mile. He tired badly when shaken up. BAY BROOM, poorly ridden, fell at the last fence. BARD ran out of the course at the fourth jump.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:37. Winner, A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAPPY INVER, $19.20, $8.70, $5.70; VACILLATE, $6.80, $4.50; SCOTCH PEPPER, $3.70.

HAPPY INVER, going into command after the start, stalled off repeated efforts from VACILLATE and came out nicely during the closing furlong. VACILLATE, going strongly in the early stages, weakened after reaching the home stretch and barely lasted to stall off SCOTCH PEPPER. The latter, slow to settle in his stride, moved boldly entering the home stretch and finished stoutly when coming through on the inside. BON SOIR bore out approaching the home stretch and appeared to sulk thereafter. PORDINA displayed good speed to enter contention at the turn after breaking tardily.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:06½. Winner, A. C. Compton's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASKED BELLE, $4.70, $2.70, $2.40; AMIJO, $2.80, $2.30; WEDGE LAD, $3.20.

MASKED BELLE, pinched back sharply at the first turn and slow to recover, went to the outside after reaching the back stretch, worked her way to the leaders gradually, then responded to severe punishment and wore AMIJO down in the last sixteenth. AMIJO took a short lead in the first six furlongs, met persistent efforts from WEDGE LAD, but could not withstand the winner under a hard drive. WEDGE LAD, bothered when LONGFUL went to her knees at the break, was rushed up on the inside to reach the pacemaker, offered repeated bids and held on courageously. SURRY raced prominently and had no excuses. LONGFUL went to her knees at the break, but recovered and finished with good energy. FLYING AMAZON began tiring after six furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:36½. Winner, Ascot Stable's ch. g. (4), by San Utar—Volition. Trained by F. E. Kraft. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERELY, $11.60, $5.20, $3.00; SASSABY, $6.20, $2.90; BEHEMOTH, $2.60.

MERELY, rated close to the pacemaker during the early running, came through on the inside when Abel took SASSABY out into the former footing at the stretch turn, then finishing resolutely was up in the last 70 yards. SASSABY, steadied in front, outran her field to the first turn, responded when shaken up, but failed to resist the winner under strong pressure. BEHEMOTH, kept under pressure early, improved his position gamely and made up ground slowly at the end. JINNEE raced in the thick of contention and held on willingly for the closing test. FLOWERY LADY saved ground, but could not threaten. ROSS raced in dull fashion.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Pocahontas. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start fair from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:05½. Winner, A. J. Sackett's ch. f. (3), by Victorian—Basbleu. Trained by W. J. Hirsch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TABITHA, $5.00, $3.20, $2.20; FLAMING MAMIE, $7.50, $3.40; BEST BID, $3.00.

TABITHA, rushed hard to the first turn to assume command, went along in front under steadying restraint until menaced at the final turn; was shaken up for the final drive and drew out swiftly. FLAMING MAMIE, a strong factor from the beginning, continued stoutly and outlasted BEST BID in the closing test. BEST BID went into the air when the break came, was rushed up on the inside entering the back stretch to reach the winner, but had too much taken out of her and she weakened badly after making a stout bid at the last curve. BRINDLE was unable to threaten at any stage. TEETOTUM had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:40. Winner, H. Baumgardner's b. c. (3), by Wisdom—Cackle. Trained by E. W. McDade. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13, 1:39 2-5, 1:45 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BREAD KING, $50.80, $12.10, $6.30; JAKOVIA, $2.90, $2.50; DALMATIA, $5.20.

BREAD KING, going in greatly improved form, sprinted into a long lead after reaching the back stretch, went along smoothly thereafter and held sway until the end. JAKOVIA, steadied in the first six furlongs, displaced DALMATIA, but failed to gain on the winner when put to a hard drive in the late stages. DALMATIA, going forwardly from the beginning, continued tenaciously on the inside and just missed getting the place award.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:07½. Winner, G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THREE DAGGERS, $18.60, $11.00, $6.60; JANE ELLEN, $11.70, $8.00; INFERNO LAD, $4.10.

THREE DAGGERS, prominent in the early racing, swung to the outside when reaching the home stretch and, closing with good courage, wore the leaders down approaching the finish. JANE ELLEN moved into a clear lead entering the back stretch, was rated along under slight restraint, responded gamely when shaken up and fought it out stoutly. INFERNO LAD, racing in his best form, had a forward factor throughout, held on willingly for the closing drive. IDLE FLIRT, forced to race on the outside, reached the leaders when leaving the back stretch, but weakened during the stretch drive. SUN ABBOT closed a good rear. LOADOSUS weakened after making a strong bid at the last curve. BUNTINO came stoutly from a slow beginning. FLAGEOLET stopped, as did ABSTAIN.

Cotton Report Forecasts Gain Over Last Year

By the Associated Press.

A cotton crop of 11,464,000 bales for 1935, a reduction of 25,000 bales from the September 1 estimate, was forecast today by the Department of Agriculture.

The indicated crop this year, based upon conditions as of October 1, is 1,828,000 bales more than 1934, but 3,202,000 bales less than the average production in the period 1928-32.

A decline in prospects of 18,000 bales in Oklahoma and 192,000 bales in Texas was reported during the last 30 days, but the department said this was nearly offset by increases in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas. Only slight changes from the September 1 forecast were shown for other States.

The Census Bureau at the same time announced cotton ginned from this year's crop prior to October 1 totaled 4,230,367 running bales, counting round bales as half bales and exclusive of linters, compared with 4,962,384 bales to that date last year and 5,908,071 bales in 1933.

The condition of the crop October 1 was reported 64.0 per cent of a normal, compared with 64.5 on September 1 and 73.6 on August 1 this year, 55.9 on October 1 last year and 57.9, the 1924-33 October 1 average.

The indicated yield was reported as 191.5 pounds per acre, compared with 192.0 a month ago, 198.3 two months ago, 170.9 produced last year and 177.1 the 1924-33 average yield.

Cotton Is Lower On Crop Report

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—The Government report placing the indicated crop at 11,464,000 bales was followed by a decline in cotton today. December contracts, after selling up to 11.23 before the report, eased off to 10.92 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 10 to 18 points.

New Cotton Record Is Set by Brazil

By the Associated Press.

A new high in consumption of raw cotton by Brazil's spinning and weaving mills was reported yesterday by the Commerce Department.

The department said Commercial Attache J. Winsor Ives reported total consumption in Brazil in 1934 reached the unprecedented peak of 120,000,000 kilos (kilo equals 2.2 pounds), compared with 102,355,000 kilos in 1933 and 67,500,000 kilos in 1929.

Gen. Electric Orders Up 34% in Quarter

New York, Oct. 8.—General Electric business for nine months was $158,943,765, the largest for that period since 1931, when it was $202,700,016. Orders received for the quarter ended September 30 were $54,400,819, which compares with $40,458,901 in the same quarter last year, an increase of 34.4 per cent.

Copper Buying Advances Price To 9¼ Cents

Demand Is Active Here and Abroad for War and Trade Uses.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—The price of domestic copper has been advanced to 9¼ cents a pound from the 9-cent level that has prevailed since September 16.

The boost in the domestic metal followed successive advances in the price of the red metal abroad until it surpassed the home level yesterday at 9.10 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports. Large orders for war purposes and commercial activity were mostly responsible for the increased demand.

On June 27, last, what was then known as "Blue Eagle" copper was lowered from 9 to 8 cents a pound following collapse of NRA and this figure prevailed until August 19, when it was elevated to 8½ cents a pound as a result of the steady creeping up of the foreign price. Another mark-up of ½ cent a pound on September 16 brought the figure to that prevailing up to late yesterday.

Foreign sales of copper were reported large during early trading today. The price remained at yesterday's level of 9.10 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports.

General Theaters Plans Reorganization

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Details of a plan for reorganization of General Theaters Equipment, Inc., were revealed today by a debenture holders group following its filing yesterday in Chancery Court in Delaware.

General Theaters, a holding company which has been in receivership since February, 1932, held a heavy interest in Fox Film Corporation, now Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

General Motors Sales Register Abrupt Decline

Earlier Change to New Models Assigned as Cause.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks to consumers in the United States in September were reported today to total 66,547 units, compared with 127,346 units in August and 71,648 units in September of last year.

Sales to dealers in the United States were 22,986 in September, against 103,089 in August and 53,738 in September, 1934.

Total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada plus over-seas shipments were 39,152 units in September, compared with 124,680 in August and 71,888 in September, 1934.

During the first nine months of this year, sales to consumers in the Nation were 951,373 units, compared with 754,121 in the corresponding period of last year.

Sales to dealers in the United States in the same periods, respectively, were 975,329 and 841,588, and total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada and over-seas shipments were 1,220,182 and 1,065,766 units.

It was pointed out in informed quarters that the sharp drop from August to September, and the level under the same month of last year, were caused by the earlier change this year to new models which are expected to be introduced formally at the New York automobile show next month.

For the first nine months, it was shown, total sales to consumers were substantially higher, confirming the trend of the entire trade.

Liberty Exchange To Close Friday

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Coolidge announced yesterday that the subscription books for the current offering of 2¾ per cent Treasury bonds of 1945-47, in exchange for Fourth Liberty Loan bonds called for redemption on October 15, 1935, will close on Friday. Subscriptions placed in the mail before midnight October 11 will be considered as having been entered before the close of the subscription books.

It also was announced that subscriptions for the Treasury bonds now approximate $431,000,000. Including $429,000,000 exchanged for the 1½ per cent Treasury notes of Series C-1939, a total of approximately $860,000,000 of the fourth-called Fourth Liberty Loan bonds have been exchanged to date.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Turn Irregular in Moderate Trading With Motors, Steels and Coppers Under Pressure—Wheat Falls—Bonds Supported.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Oct. 8.—Mixed prices for stocks in trading volume a little greater than that of yesterday continued strength in Government bonds. Dull exchanges and lower wheat prices marked what was rather an uninteresting day in Wall Street. Stock volume was approximately 1,200,000 shares. Prices were not driven down vigorously, but pressure was usually present, and the bull drives were restricted. December wheat closed 2⅛ points lower at 105½ cents a bushel.

In stocks the speculative play was mostly in specialties. Only a half dozen stocks were able to look bullish. A leader was Greyhound, which lengthened its advance of the past two days to more than 6 points, and gave every indication of a strong speculative drive. Another stock which has had the advantage of persistent buying, Monsanto Chemical, continued forward to a new high level. Cutler Hammer rose more than 2 points to a new high. People's Gas climbed about as much, as did National Biscuit. New highs were set for Budd, Cleveland-Graphite, Neisner and Underwood-Elliott-Fisher.

Losses of 1 to 2 points were common among some of the recent industrial leaders. Allied Chemical, Glidden and American Can were in that class. Copper stocks were lower on news of a further advance in metal prices. Public utilities were mildly active for a while, and some of them climbed a point or so, but rails lost ground. Steels were heavy, and the motor group lost its drive with the September showing of General Motors and the rumors regarding Ford. One was the report that a low-priced quality car would be offered and the other was that prices would be cut on the ordinary models. Both lacked confirmation, but were broadcast about the Street.

Oils Make Headway.

Oil shares gained confidence, although gains were moderate. Socony, Phillips, Houston and Texas were well liked. Farm implements had a setback with wheat and cotton. Tractions also worked lower. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke lost half its open market value on one sale. Eastman and Business Machines were strong.

Money markets were placid as ever on the surface. Figures of member banks in 91 cities as of October 2 reflected the first of the month currency outflow and net payments into the Reserve banks on Treasury account which were offset by the gold influx only in New York, where bank reserves and deposits increased. Excess reserves of all the member banks reporting dropped during the week from $2,025,000,000 to $1,997,000,000, but there was an increase in excess funds of banks in the New York district from $1,112,000,000 to $1,164,000,000. Chicago bank excess reserves were down from $265,000,000 to $259,000,000.

Member bank credit decline in the period, decreases of $45,000,000 in holding of Government securities and of $45,000,000 in other securities more than offsetting an increase of $40,000,000 in security loans. Real estate loans expanded $5,000,000, mainly because of a $6,000,000 rise in this item in the San Francisco area. Miscellaneous loans, including commercial, were down $1,000,000 on the week, increases in interior districts nearly offsetting a $14,000,000 drop in this item in the New York sector. Reserves fell $37,000,000 and vault cash $13,000,000. Net demand deposits, including Government deposits, dropped $79,000,000, but $20,000,000 of this apparently was merely a switch into time deposits, which increased by that amount. Of the $20,000,000 increase, $11,000,000 was in the New York City reporting banks.

Guessing on Sanctions.

Foreign exchange traders were still in the dark over the nature of the sanctions which the League of Nations may authorize, and consequently no more could be guessed than before on the probable effect on international trade. Sterling and francs were steady to firm. Lire dropped a trifle. What will happen to the lira if the Bank of Italy has to enter the control market directly, instead of spending as at present on the Bank of France, is an interesting subject for speculation, in view of the expected financial sanctions.

Industrial news also was rather dull. Attention was paid to the lively retail business reported last week for this and other districts, but the holidays this week were regarded as an offset. Meanwhile other evidence came of a slackening in the pace of autumn business activity. Preparation of new models is having its effect on the motor industry, as shown by the sharp drop in September reported today by General Motors.

The unfavorable portions of the trade news were held to be by no means conclusive of a change in direction of business, but they were sufficient, thrown in with the war uncertainties, to increase the tendency in some quarters to let the markets alone for a while. Meanwhile, under the surface continues to run a deep stream of gold imports, heavy Federal spending and increased purchase of raw materials for war preparations.

2 Million Gain In Gross Made BySouthernRy.

Further Increase in Revenues Expected by Harrison.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8.—Stockholders of the Southern Railway re-elected four directors whose terms expire and heard encouraging reports from President Fairfax Harrison at their annual meeting here today.

Directors re-elected for three-year terms were John Stewart Bryan, of Richmond, and Oliver Iselin, Devereux Milburn and George A. Sloan, of New York.

Mr. Harrison reported a substantial increase in revenues for the Southern since August 1 and predicted that the condition would continue during the next year. Commenting on a continued increase in operation expenses he said the "burden of wages we are paying today is too great for our revenues."

For the fourth successive year, President Harrison said, there has been an income deficit, although he predicted the next year would show substantial improvement over the last. The deficit was given for the past 12 months at $2,795,243 compared with $734,799 for 1933, $11,218,506 for 1932 and $5,922,842 for 1931. He said this made a total of $20,671,392 in deficits charged against the book account of profits accumulated during the years of prosperity.

Total gross revenue from operation of the railroad during the year amounted to $78,183,701, an increase of $2,035,597 as compared with 1933, or 2.67 per cent.

Peoples Drug Sales Gain.

Sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., were announced at the head office here yesterday as totaling $1,530,609 in September this year, as compared with $1,335,201 in September, 1934, an increase of $195,408 or 14.6 per cent.

Sales for the first nine months of the present year amounted to $13,809,196, the report added, in comparison with $12,004,829, an increase over last year of $1,804,367, or 15 per cent.

The percentage gain in September was not up to the advance in the previous month, August sales being 23.6 per cent ahead of business in August, 1934. The September report, however, is in line with recent reports of gain in department store sales in Washington and other leading cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District.

Florida Ship Canal.

In their current bond review, J. S. Bache & Co. say: "Additional funds have been allotted to speed the construction of the Trans-Florida Ship Canal. Ultimately this may have some adverse effect upon the Atlantic Coast Line, Seaboard Air Line, Central of Georgia and other roads. This is a matter of the distant future and is contingent upon the completion of a commercially satisfactory waterway. In the meantime, these carriers may be assisted through the transportation of materials being used in the construction of the project."

Accountants' Meeting.

District of Columbia Institute of Certified Public Accountants will hold its first quarterly meeting of the fiscal year at the Hay-Adams House tomorrow evening. Dr. Clarence S. Marsh, associate director of the American Council on Education, will speak on professional training.

Representatives and members of faculties of all local institutions having accounting courses have been invited to give their views on the subject.

Monthly Sales Talk.

The monthly meeting of the Washington Sales Representative Association was held yesterday in the La Fayette Hotel, George C. Cook, president, presiding. The guest speaker was William A. Vanduzer, Washington traffic director, who spoke on the necessity for safe driving.

Bankers and "G" Men.

The public affairs committee of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Bankers will visit the Department of Justice this evening to inspect the famous laboratory of the "G" men.

Piano Sales Revive; Now at 5-Year Top

Chicago, Oct. 8 (AP).—Piano shipments in August were 50 per cent greater than during July and 55 per cent above the same month of 1934, W. A. Mennie, secretary of the National Piano Manufacturers Association, reported yesterday. For eight months of this year shipments were greater than for any corresponding period since 1930.

StockExchange To Reorganize Internal Rule

President Gay Submits Three Phases of Readjustment.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—The executive mechanism of the New York Stock Exchange is being gradually overhauled. Members of the exchange studied today details of the job submitted by Charles R. Gay, president.

Attention in Wall Street focused primarily on three phases of Gay's report: The concentration of the bulk of operating responsibility in the hands of Dean K. Worcester, executive vice president since last May, the functioning of a "service station" for brokers and the pending study on customers' men.

It is understood that under Worcester's supervision a substantial amount of exchange readjustment is to be done. They point out that during the boom years various departments sprung up to fill pressing needs that some of them eventually overlapped.

Specifically, the operation of a "service station" for exchange members is an effort to make readily available to brokers technical information of importance to them.

Long a point of controversy in Wall Street, it is expected that the forthcoming report on customers' men will rule definitely on their status, drawing rigid lines concerning qualifications, salaries and methods of operation.

Wheat 2c Lower On Foreign News

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Their confidence shaken by continued weakness of foreign prices, wheat market longs hastened to accept profits today, plunging quotations down more than 2 cents a bushel. Unsettling grain market sentiment were unconfirmed rumors as to the progress of peace negotiations in Europe, conflicting war news, and disappointment in the lagging world demand for wheat.

At the close prices were 1½ to 2⅜ cents below yesterday's finish; December, $1.05⅜-$1.05½, and corn was 1⅝-2¼ off; December, 62⅝-62¾. Oats lost, ½-¾; rye, 1½-2⅝, and barley, 1 cent.

Rayon Yarn Output Sets All-Time High

Shipments in Past Three Months Greater Than Mill Production.

New York, Oct. 8.—Shipments of rayon yarn from the plants of American producers during September established a new high record for all time, exceeding the previous high record month of January this year by a substantial margin, according to the Textile Economics Bureau, recently organized to undertake research work for the rayon industry.

September was the third consecutive month during which shipments exceeded mill production, resulting in a reduction in surplus stocks to the equivalent of 5½ weeks' supply, based upon the current rate of consumption. The shipments index for September was 583 against 550 for August and a 1934 monthly average of 353.

Wool consumption also continues at a high rate, "breaking all records since 1923." The August rate of apparel-class wool consumption was 6,648,000 pounds per week, clean basis, compared with 5,894,000 pounds per week in July, an increase of 13 per cent. For the first eight months of 1935 wool consumption, of this class, was 81 per cent greater than the corresponding 1934 period.

Parker Rust Proof Declares $1 Extra

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Parker Rust Proof Co. of Detroit declared today an extra dividend of $1 and a regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a common share, payable November 20 to holders of record November 11.

A similar extra payment was made on November 1, 1934, and on August 20, 1935, a stock dividend of 10 per cent was disbursed with the regular quarterly payment.

Zinc Raised to 4.85; Stocks on Hand Lower

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The American Smelting & Refining Co. today advanced the price of zinc .10 of a cent a pound to 4.85 cents, East St. Louis basis.

The American Zinc Institute reported today that stocks of zinc in the United States at the end of September were 106,316 short tons compared with 112,445 tons at the end of August and 106,570 tons at the end of September of 1934.

Nickel Plate Deposits.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—A total of $9,535,750, or slightly better than 63 per cent, of the $15,000,000 Nickel Plate Railroad 6 per cent notes, which matured October 1, have been deposited under the company's plan to extend the notes for three years.

Things as They Are

By Samuel Crowther.

THE change in the European situation has brought out international balance to the cetner of the stage.

The condition of our international balance seems to be something far away from the fatness or thinness of one's own pocketbook. The two, however, are motst intimately connected, and one otf the reasons why business and banking are so often taken unawares in price movements lies in the persistent refusal to recognize that our international accounts are a part of the domestic accounts of the country.

A half century ago our trade with the world was largely in goods. And the Federal authorities have long kept an exact tally on all the goods that cross our borders. Today our trade is only partly in goods. An indeterminate amount consists of the exchange of securities and forms of credit. On this part we have no figures. Since the gold-buying policy of the Terasury went into effect, a very large portion of our imports has been gold and silver.

The significance of the change in the nature of our foreign transactions has been widely ignored because of the refusal to recognize that a great change has come about in the monetary affairs of the world. In the days before the war, when foreign trade was really trade, gold moved from one country to another only to settle debts that could not be paid immediately in goods. The trade was between individuals. Only since the war have governments been the chief factors in foreign finance.

* * * *

TO be concrete. In 1929 foreign-owned demand deposits in New York banks totaled about $3,000,000,000. The comfortable view, as expressed by Wall street, was that foreigners had sent all their spare money to the safest and soundest market in the world. It is true that foreigners with speculative inclinations and cash to spare did send their money to be loaned on the New York stock exchange, but the amount of private capital which can at any time be shifted is comparatively small. One hears a great deal about flights of money and one might imagine that several billion dollars, all belonging to individuals, was ever ready to wing its way to the most profitable market. There is nothing at all to that notion.

Ours is the wealthiest country in the world, but all our rich men put together probably could not on a single day command $200,000,000 without selling securities or borrowing. Capital in large quantities can not fly. Rich men are never in a position to liquidate their estates overnight without taking tremendous losses. At the most, not over five men in this country ever have bank balances beyond $1,000,000. Large individual balances are accumulated only for special purposes.

* * * *

IN 1929 the largest owner of bank balances was France, because France took over foreign exchange. The Germans also had large but thoroughly disguised balances. These balances formed a part of our banking structure.

Prices in the New York stock market broke in a panic in 1929, but it was in 1931-32 that the slow, deadening drain began. It was then that these foreign balances began to leave us and to curtail the ability of the banks to grant credit. Years ago the Detroit banks were always worried lest some day Mr. Ford might draw a check for $5,000,000 or $10,000,000. It is quite the same with large foreign balances.

The foreign balances today are larger than they ever have been, but they are not in the form of bank deposits. They are in the form of securities. The amount is unknown—although an inventory of the foreign holdings in the United States is now being made by the Department of Commerce. It is believed that they will run to upwards of $7,000,000,000.

Gold is coming in every day. In 1934 we imported gold in the amount of $1,217,000,000. The rate this year has been very high. This gold is not coming to us as the result of any trade transaction. The Treasury, when it started out on its extraordinary program of raising prices by raising the price of gold, stood ready to buy all the gold in the world at $35 an ounce. Gold in today's world is almost a useless commodity. The greatest profit is to be had in shipping it to the United States, selling it to the Treasury and converting the proceeds into American securities. Therefore we are buying not only the entire output of the world's new gold, but also a good part of the world's hoardings.

* * * *

WE do not know how much of this is being shipped by governments and how much by individuals, but we do know that we are accumulating an interest which may stay with us until the European war scare is over and then be suddenly withdrawn or which may be liquidated to furnish funds for the indirect purchase of war materials in our own or some other market. The Italian government has been paying in New York funds for its purchases. These funds, as was predicted here several weeks ago, are being mostly gained by liquidation. The foreign interest needs careful watching. Is it being watched at all?

Rule by Martial Law In Terre Haute Upheld

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 7 (AP).—Socialist and labor leaders today lost the Federal court case they brought to test the constitutionality of martial law in Vigo County.

Three Federal judges who heard arguments on September 20 united in holding that Gov. McNutt acted within his rights in placing Terre Haute and Vigo County under martial law last July at the time of a general strike in this city. Martial law has never been lifted, although all but a few of the National Guardsmen sent here were withdrawn shortly after termination of the two-day general strike.

Otis Cox, an official of the Enamelers and Stampers Union, arrested by the military for violating the martial law proclamation, filed suit to enjoin the Governor and other State officials from continuing martial law in effect.

E. BARRETT PRETTYMAN and WALTER L. FOWLER, Attorneys. District Building.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding a District Court. In re condemnation of land for the widening of Blair road northwest, from a point south of Peabody street to Underwood street, in the District of Columbia. District Court, No. 2366. Notice and order of publication. Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia (pursuant to a certain provision of the Act of Congress, approved March 4, 1913, entitled "An Act making appropriations for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes," whereby they are authorized to open, extend, or widen any street, aveuue, road or highway to conform with the plan of the permanent system of highways in that portion of the District of Columbia outside of the cities of Washington and Georgetown adopted under the Act of Congress approved March 2, 1893, as amended by the acts of Congress approved June 28, 1898, and May 28, 1926, respectively, by condemnation under the provisions of subchapter 1 of Chapter XV, of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia), have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the widening of Blair road northwest, from a point south of Peabody street to Underwood street, in the District of Columbia, as shown on a map or plat filed with the said petitions, as a part thereof, and praying also that this court empanel a jury in accordance with the law provided for in such cases to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the said widening of Blair road northwest, from a point south of Peabody street to Underwood street, in the District of Columbia, and the condemnation of the land necessary for the purposes thereof, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, plus all or any part of the costs and expenses of said proceeding, upon any lands which the jury may find will be benefited, as provided for in and by the aforesaid Act of Congress approved May 28, 1926, it is, by the Court, this 26th day of September, 1935, ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings, and they are hereby warned and commanded, to appear in this court on or before the 7TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1935, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessments of benefits of the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published twice a week for two successive weeks in the Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post and the Washington Herald, newspapers published in the said District, commencing at least twenty days before the said 7th day of November, 1935. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States Marshal, or his deputies, upon each of the owners of the fee of the land to be condemned herein, as may be found in the said Marshal, or his deputies, within the District of Columbia, and upon the tenants and occupants of the same, before the said 7th day of November, 1935. By the Court: PEYTON GORDON, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By HARRY M. HULL, Assistant Clerk. 1.28.9

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

BACK and forth, time after time, year in and year out, between Damascus and Medina and Mecca, runs one of the strangest trains in the world. Outward bound from Damascus it carries the Mohammedan dead of the ancient city—bodies to be buried in Mecca and Medina. This train hauls more dead bodies than all other freight on its trip out of Damascus.

Every good Mohammedan believes that if he his buried in the sacred cities of Mecca or Medina, he will enjoy eternal salvation in the next world. Buying paradise forever at the cost of a railroad ticket seems cheap enough to them, hence the believers prepare against the future by arranging to have their budies taken to one of the sacred cities for burial.

Mecca, the great Holy City of Islam, is the chief town of Hejaz, in Arabia. It was here in this trading center centuries ago that Mohammed came with his vision of religion, and here that vision took shape. Mecca was the starting place for the crusade against nonbelievers that carried the word of Mohammed throughout the then known world.

Medina, likewise, sacred to Mohammedanism, lays its claim to religious fame to the fact that it was there Mohammed took refuge on his emigration from Mecca, and there, it is said, is his tomb. Medina, a city of agriculture before Mohammed's time, became a holy sanctuary at his command.

Ambitious Aspirants for the Merry-Merry Storm "Follies" Tryout 1,200 Strong!

Quest for Jobs Swamps Judges On First 'Call'

Ninety Per Cent Are Unfit; Prologue and Epilogue; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The unemployment problem, it seems, is still acute in certain branches of show business. It has always been the case that there have been more chorus and show girls than there have been jobs, but now even that condition appears to be aggravated.

This is suggested by word that comes to this desk from Mr. C. P. Greneker, mouthpiece for the Shubert interests, to the effect that 1,200 girls answered the call for dancers and show girls for Billie Burke's 1936 edition of the "Ziegfeld Follies." These 1,200 girls occupied every seat in the orchestra of the Majestic Theater in New York and crowded 20 rows deep across the entire width of the stage.

This is an unprecedented number of applicants to respond to a single call. It has no parallel in the history of the New York stage. Judges who were to make the final selections from this group stated that in 25 years of handling such calls they never had seen so great or so varied a mass of femininity in search of employment as this. Girls were eliminated at the rate of 150 per hour and, even so, the talent test was continued well into the evening.

Majority Unfit for Hire.

Perhaps it is not the part of justice to give the impression that "show business" alone was represented in this tremendous response to an ostensible opportunity to go to work, for one of the unusual characteristics of this particular audition was the obvious unfitness of the girls for the places they were applying to fill. Although beauty of face and figure was specifically stipulated as the first requisite, more than 90 per cent of each test group of 150 were speedily eliminated.

Almost half a hundred of the girls were accompanied by their mothers. In several instances, both applied for jobs and the daughters were the first to be eliminated!

One girl is reported to have slipped back in line four times only to be turned down each time until finally she was recognized and definitely and permanently eliminated from further competition.

Isn't there something, somewhere about "hope springs eternal . . ."?

Come From Everywhere.

One of the old axioms of the Ziegfeld day, that some of the most beautiful girls spring from the most unexpected walks of life, seems still to hold good.

Interrogation of a representative group of 20 of the girls revealed that 7 were stenographers—4 of whom were unemployed—3 were college students, 4 sales clerks, 1 a school teacher and the last just a home girl.

Only 37 out of the entire 1,200 had ever had previous stage experience and of these 9 had been in earlier "Follies."

Only 17 per cent of the entire group were blondes, 4 per cent were readheads and the remaining number had either black or dark brown hair. What, no platinums!

One surmises that the casting bureaus of Hollywood, that have from 200 girls up, each, signed for screen engagements when, as and if any presents itself, were the smart ones!

Washington may see similar competition when Katharine Cornell comes to town to present Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" in the National Theater the week of October 14—which is no farther away than next week. Miss Cornell has almost shattered a precedent in the matter of "suping" in Shakesperean productions. When she left New York yesterday for Baltimore, where her tour opens on Thursday night, she carried with her company 14 young men and women to dance in the ballroom, to crowd the streets of Verona, to witness the death of Mercutio and to mourn at the bier of the immortal lovers. However, in order not entirely to betray the age-old tradition of the "supers," in each city she will engage one stalwart youth for a guard on stage. This line, presumably, will form at the stage entrance and the first come will not necessarily be first served.

Congratulations.

Mr. Daniel S. Terrell, of the Warner Brothers local publicity department, under the direction of Frank La Falce, and Miss Martha Skidmore were married in the home of the bride's parents, 4452 Volta place, Foxhall Village, yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Mr. Edward de Selding Melcher, our esteemed afternoon contemporary, sped to the ceremony practically from the train from Hollywood to act as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at which the many friends of the bridal couple, both in and out of the theater, extended congratulations and Godspeed on a brief honeymoon.

Nino Martini and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, favorites of the operatic stage—but of different generations—make their screen debuts in "Here's to Romance," chief film feature of the bill beginning Friday at Loew's Fox Theater. A private preview of this subject will be proffered the drama desks in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange this afternoon at 1. This is one of the productions that are slowly but inevitably paving the way for a complete grand opera on the silver sheet in the not far distant future. For further evidence of the trend in this direction see the drama section of last Sabbath's Washington Post, page 3, col. 1.

By Way of Argument.

I do not hold with those who resent the prologue and epilogue between which the major action of "Nell Gwyn" is sandwiched on the screen at the Belasco.

Both are laid in the tumbledown hovel of an elderly woman who lies dead on the rickety bed in surroundings of utmost squalor. The bailif has come to dispossess her, with two burly ruffians to help carry out her pitiful belongings. But neither he nor they can understand why she has not sold a handsome clock that hangs on the wall for more than enough to meet her debts.

Discovering that the woman he has been trying to awaken is dead, the bailiff turns to his assistants and begins to relate the story of Nell Gwyn's life. The action then is picked up at the council table of Charles II of England in the year 1668 and proceeds through the year 1685.

The story of Nell and the King having been told, the epilogue concludes the sorry observations of the bailiff.

The Gals Didn't Prosper.

I see nothing out of keeping in this device. The mistresses of sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth century European monarchs, did not profit greatly by their preferment, following the demise of the rulers whose favor they briefly enjoyed. The guillotine was Du Barry's lot, Mme. Pompadour, having precipitated the Seven Years War, breathed her last at the age of 42 and others of the sumptuous ladies who rose from obscurity to the opulence of court life sank again into the depths of despondency.

It seems to me that the story of King Charles' infatuation for the hoyden from Drury Lane is given added point and forcefulness by the glimpse of poor Nell's gay, but hopeless, futility afforded by the picture's grim prologue and epilogue.

That expensive clock that hung on the wall of her hut, by the way, was given her by the King.

Do you happen to remember the climax and denouement of Fannie Hurst's novel of "Back Streets?" Not that it matters.

"Lady Precious Stream," the Chinese drama by F. Haing that has met with such enormous success in London during the past two years, has been selected by the Drama Guild of Washington as one of the six productions planned for the ensuing season—if arrangements can be made.

Negotiations are now under way with Methoun & Co., of London, publishers of the play, for acting rights in the Capital. Professional rights to the play have been purchased by Morris Gest, who proposes to produce it in New York this winter, with Anna May Wong in the leading role. And that's the rub.

A Veteran Passes.

This column records with feelings of deep personal sorrow the death on Sunday night at 11:45 o'clock in Garfield Hospital of Stephen L. Eilbacher, for many years manager of the Warner Brothers', formerly Crandall's, Tivoli Theater, at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest.

Mr. Eilbacher was one of the veterans of the motion picture field in the National Capital, having begun in the early days of the industry as usher, thicket taker and all around handy man at the old Princess Theater, northeast, under the management of Joseph P. Morgan.

In later years, when he was general manager of the Crandall enterprises in and around Washington, Mr. Morgan appointed Steve to the managership of the Apollo Theater, northeast. He served successively as manager of the Savoy and other Crandall houses, finally taking over the management of the Tivoli, largest and handsomest of the Capital's residential picture theaters.

Mr. Eilbacher was 42 years old. He was a native of Baltimore, where he was born in 1893. His untimely death will be mourned by a host of friends in and out of the film industry.

Two interesting new publications recently have come to hand, each filling a long-felt want. One is the "Handy Green Book;" the other, the first issue of the "Movie Action" Magazine.

The "Handy Green Book" is a convenient, pocket-size directory of the theater industry—as its foreword says, "a handy reference, guide and contact medium, covering legitimate drama, motion pictures, concerts and radio." It affords specific information regarding personnel, street addresses, etc., in the amusement world that no other publication of which I am aware provides in quite such compact and convenient form.

The "Movie Action" Magazine is a Street & Smith publication in which a novelized version of one important feature film is printed, together with model short-reel scenarios, motion picture reviews and appropriate fiction.

The issue of "Movie Action" now on my desk will not be found on the news stands until October 16—a week from Wednesday. It is a pulp mag which seems to have discovered a new field unoccupied by any other periodical of its kind. The novelized feature in the first issue is M-G-M's "China Seas." If that isn't "movie action," I never saw any!

Sour-Note Note.

Shakespeare Society Opens Season Monday

The Washington Shakespeare Society will open its nineteenth season Monday with presentation of its 234th regular program since reorganization in 1917.

Eight monthly meetings will be held this season. Addresses and scenes from Shakespearian plays will be offered, with two full-length productions, "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "Anthony and Cleopatra."

Her Dancing Is Helpful to 'Venus'

Since "Venus in Silk" is an operetta of variegated musical pattern, it is essential that its dancing partake of a similar diversity. This is supplied in part by Audrey Christie, pictured above, whose eccentric numbers with Gilbert Lamb provide one of the highlights of the performance. "Venus in Silk" comes to the Capital after a week in Pittsburgh and proceeds from here directly to Broadway. Nancy McCord and J. Harold Murray have the romantic leads.

"Venus in Silk," true to its title, is a thing of exquisite beauty clothed in the shimmering loveliness of lilting melody, romantic charm and the visual fascination of color, movement and life.

Laurence Schwab, producer and co-author of the book and lyrics, has chosen to denominate his first production of recent years and the inaugural of the National Theater's season of touring attractions, a musical play. It is, rather, an operetta, conceived and executed in the best Viennese manner, played with zest and sung with spontaneous enthusiasm by a cast of splendid voices and a huge mixed chorus of rousing capability.

In story, score, costuming, settings and performance, "Venus in Silk" last evening fulfilled the most sanguine hopes of a capacity first-night audience, keyed high in expectancy by the glowing reports of its many superlative qualities emanating from Pittsburgh, where it was presented for the first time in its present perfected form last week.

Plot Shrewdly Devised.

"Venus in Silk" is unique in more than one regard. Primarily it is distinguished by its clever utilization of the familiar device of mistaken identity. Early in the first act, the plot seems as transparent as a drop of morning dew, but as the developments progress its thread of romance becomes increasingly tangled and interest proportionately multiplied. It is an odd conceit, too, in an entertainment of this stamp to withhold a character of purely comic purpose until the last act.

There are, to be sure, comic lines and incidents throughout acts one and two, but the real comedian of the piece does not appear until the last act, into which has been packed all of the ridiculous buffoonery that might, with a story less skillfully contrived, have been needed to salvage the play's earlier intervals from boredom.

There is no boredom in any act of "Venus in Silk." When the romance of the Princess Stephanya is not being advanced by the brittle humor of the dialogue, attention is being centered in musical numbers of fine intrinsic worth, dances that range from the frenzies of the czardas to the contortionistic eccentricities of an acrobatic lieutenant, or the electrifying ensembles that preserve the highest traditions of opera bouffe.

Scenes Abound in Color.

All of the diverse elements of appeal concentrated in this carnival of melody and movement are splashed with brilliant color. The costuming runs to no fixed chromatic harmonies, but is kaleidoscopic in its posturings of all the colors of the spectrum.

There is more definite form, but no less variety, in the musical treatment of the work by Robert Stolz. Unlike the Strausses, Lehar, Kalman and others of the Viennese school, Stolz, a composer whose works have been notable over a period of three decades, is not hopelessly, nor even conspicuously, addicted to the waltz. There is a waltz in "Venus in Silk," as a matter of fact, but it is provided as a dancing interlude for Alice Dudley and Jack Cole rather than as an insistent argument that three-four time must be the metier of every Hungarian composer.

The story, if we must go into that, concerns a princess whose former husband has left her an inheritance that is contested in the courts by a cad who takes her portrait in oil, known as the "Venus in Silk," into court to impress the jury with the validity of his claim against one he is pleased to deem a seductress of sorts.

This young man presents himself incognito at his own castle, being occupied by the princess. Her betrothed has been strangely abducted to prevent her marriage. A notorious brigand also figures in the complications, and he and The Stranger conveniently exchange identities as the exigencies of the moment suggest. All very engaging, nicely articulated and substantial enough for every present purpose.

Score Boasts Hits.

The score possesses at least three numbers that will find their way to instant popularity.

Foremost among these is "Baby Play With Me," sung and danced by Audrey Christie and Gilbert Lamb, assisted by the dancing chorus, all strumming ukuleles. This number is reprised during the action and played as the exit march after the final curtain and was being hummed both ways from the theater on E street last night at 11:30. Other numbers that seem destined to click with the public are "You Are the One" and "I Ask Not Who You Are." "Zingra" is a lively opening for the last act and the "Musical Scene" here, between the two strangers—suitor and bandit—is a lyrical gem.

In addition to those already mentioned, there are, of course, the completely competent principals who supply the romantic interest. These are Nancy McCord, a striking brunette, with a soprano voice of golden high notes, and J. Harold Murray, who has been a tenor of the first musical comedy and light operatic rank since even the days before "Rio Rita." They play excellently well together and their voices do much for the glorification of the Stolz melodies.

Florenz Ames, as a nervous little baron; Roy Gordon, as the more perspicacious Father Dolomite; Jack Young, as Jani, a Gypsy boy, who matches nimbleness as a dancer with Cole and Dudley, and Lamb and Christie; Joseph Macauley, as the bandit, and John Sheehan, whose comic antics enliven only the last act, are the others who contribute most to the unequivocal hit scored last night by an operetta of highest quality.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Oct. 8.

ON THE "Millions in the Air" set there is a girl dancing. Before you even hear her name you're told, "We've got another Eleanor Powell." Every female hoofer now is a Powell—and, of course, every male dancer is a Fred Astaire. It isn't fair to performers to have this publicity before they make their appearance. Powell and Astaire didn't have to overcome it. The girl who is dancing is Eleanor Whitney. She is slim and pretty, a grand hoofer, and known to Broadway. She does several numbers in "Millions in the Air," but the flicker is not about her and she doesn't go through the story. It isn't patterned for her as "The Broadway Melody" was for Powell. Eleanor Whitney is too good a performer and worked too hard to be held back by wrong publicity. She came on the set after lunch to do her dance routine. She did five hours of dancing. Then it was decided to use the first take.

DIETRICH.

Marlene Dietrich, in a beautiful white thin evening gown, is playing a scene in "Desire" for Director Frank Borzage. Miss Dietrich seems calm, reads her lines perfectly, and when it is over she smiles at the director and the cameraman. Director Borzage says: "Let's do it again." They do it again and again. Before the next take, Miss Dietrich takes off her slippers. She stands there in an evening gown, barefooted. She walks about and plays the scene in this fashion. She likes to romp about barefooted.

THE Eddie Cantor flicker, now called "Strike Me Pink," is finally in production. A dance number called "The Lady Dances" is being rehearsed by Robert Alton. He staged the numbers for "Anything Goes," and was signed by Sam Goldwyn, who tried to hire everything connected with this show. Goldwyn announced that he was going to produce a musical with Vinton Freedley by the same combination who prepared "Anything Goes." Alton gives his direction, and the chorines swing into action. The number is led by a dance bumper, discovered by one of the Goldwyn scouts in the Paradise Night Club. The girl is Rita Rio, a hot Mexican from Philadelphia. Rita certainly can swing it. There is only one thing about Hollywood that annoys Rita—as it has other gals from the Broadway night clubs. The studio insists that Rita Rio must attend school while she is in the flicker. "I quit school to go on the stage," says Rita, "and now they're putting me back. I came to Hollywood for pictures, not for school."

On another stage Eddie Cantor is playing the role of Eddie Pink for Director Norman Taurog. It is the first day of work, and Cantor comes on the set 15 minutes late. The assistant director shouts about this, telling Cantor that he is holding up production. Eddie answers: "Say, I waited four and a half months for this picture to get started. It can wait 15 minutes for me."

WILLIAM POWELL is playing the role of Florenz Ziegfeld. It is a theater set, and it is supposed to be the New Amsterdam Theater. A rehearsal of the "Ziegfeld Follies" is taking place. On the stage of the theater there is a lamppost and a bench, and in front of the lamppost stands Fannie Brice singing "My Man." A group of chorus girls stand in the rear of the theater and they are supposed to cry, so touched are thew, when they hear Fannie Brice sing this song. Director Robert Leonard is arranging the camera and the lights to photograph the line of chorines. While waiting for the setup, Jean Harlow comes on the sound stage to visit William Powell. Then a little later Myrna Loy comes on the set. She just has been told she is to play the Billie Burke role in the flicker, and she is discussing it with Director Leonard.

• • • •

In a rehearsal hall Dance Director Seymour Felix is rehearsing a dance routine for "The Great Ziegfeld." These gals will be the Ziegfeld chorines. While waiting for Dance Director Felix to rehearse, the girls sit about in groups knitting. Every chorus girl is knitting except the chorines, who actually once worked for Ziegfeld. They sit gossiping. "How do you like this? Ziegfeldfeld girls sitting about knitting," asks Agnes O'Laughlin. "You wouldn't believe it, would you? We used to sit around—but only to wait for orchids." Then Agnes added: "But maybe this is better."

All District Residents Asked to Join Red Cross

The hope that every citizen will enroll in the annual roll call of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross, was expressed yesterday by the District Commissioners in a letter to Mrs. John A. Johnston, director of the roll call.

The Commissioners praised the "worthwhile efforts of the local chapter in training of Washingtonians in first aid and life-saving as well as home hygiene and the care of the sick."

In 1934, the Commissioners said, the District Chapter stood at the head of the list of the more than 3,700 chapters throughout the country, obtaining a total membership of 36,584, and yielding $53,931 in receipts.

See happy JACK BENNY he's swell!
BROADWAY MELODY of 1936
NOW.... the greatest musical ever produced!
So crammed with glorious music . . . so packed with fun, romance, spectacle . . . so teeming with stars of screen, stage and radio, it sets a new High in screen musicals . . . From now on all musical shows will be judged by this!!!
She can dance—
She can sing—
She's a darling—
ELEANOR POWELL
You'll be humming and singing these BIG SONG HITS
"Broadway Rhythm"
"I've Got a Feelin' You're Foolin'"
"On a Sunday Afternoon"
"You're My Lucky Star"
"Sing Before Breakfast"
By Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, the melody-makers who never miss!
NOTE
Because of the sensational advance notices as to the bigness of "Broadway Melody" there have been rumors that it would be shown at $2.00 admissions. We are happy to advise that OUR REGULAR SCALE OF PRICES will be in effect during the showing of this picture.
